Gaming Jury Picked

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday cleared Government agents of wiretapping charges leveled by gambling defendants William "Snags" Lewis, Attilio Acalotti and Frank Billeci.

After hearing evidence for two and a half days, Judge Holtzoff ruled it is not wiretapping "if a (telephone) conversation is recorded manually or electrically, at the instance of, or with the acquiescence or consent of one of the parties."

As a result of his ruling, the first on the subject in this jurisdiction, evidence obtained from two "monitored" calls last March will be admissible in the trial in which the defendants are charged with owning and operating a numbers lottery.

After his ruling, a jury of seven men and five women were selected to try the case. At Judge Holtzoff's request two alternate jurors, both men, were also sworn.

In his opening statement to the jury, prosecutor William Hitz charged that the three defendants were key figures in the District numbers racket.

Acalotti took numbers bets in his apartment at 908 14th st. nw., and in the vicinity of Thomas Circle, Hitz told the jury.

According to Hitz, these bets were "laid off" by Acalotti with Billeci, a Washington Times-Herald circulation agent, who lives at 509 Margaret dr., Silver Spring, Md.

In gambling parlance, bets are "laid off" when a gambler accumulates what he believes to be too much money on a single wager and asks other gamblers to share his risk.

Billeci in turn worked for Lewis, who operated a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate with headquarters in an air-conditioned, sound-proof room in a bungalow at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md., Hitz charged.

The 3 defendants and 33 others were indicted last April by the

Gambled Half Of Pay, Says Ex-U. S. Aide

A former Government employe testified yesterday that over a recent five-year period he regularly squandered half his salary in betting with professional gamblers here.

Giving the District Court testimony was Bryant O. Pierce, 35, of 316 18th pl. ne., a former field representative under the Civil Service Commission, he said. Pierce testified in his own behalf before he was acquitted of a charge of swindling one of the men he named out of $3000.

Pierce linked four men to his gambling transactions. They are: William (Snags) Lewis, arrested last year in the United States Attorney's drive against the gam-

2 Republican Senators Go To D. C. Group

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Two Republican Senators yesterday received promise of appointment to the District Committee and to ringside seats at what may be a major reorganization of the committee staff.

The new members—Senators Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) and Harry Darby (R., Kans.) were selected for the District Committee, and also the Civil Service Committee, by the Republican Committee on Committees. The selections are subject to Senate Republican conference approval at a meeting today, and to Senate ratification, a formality.

The committee staff organization may come this afternoon. District Committee Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) planned to arrange for a meeting at 4 p. m.

He said there would be an executive session but would not discuss the agenda. The last executive session in the fall brought a demand for resignations of all members of the staff, with an invitation to apply anew for their jobs.

Following that, Robert H. Mollohan, close associate of Senator Neely, was assigned to the top District Committee staff job, suc-

G. U. Seniors Expect to Earn $19,110 by 1975

College seniors at Georgetown expect to be earning an average of $8243 in 10 years and an average of $19,110 in 25 years, according to a poll conducted by the college newspaper, the Hoya.

Only one man of the 290 seniors answering the poll, which represented close to 90 percent of the college's graduating class, estimated that he would be earning $20,000 to $50,000 by 1960, while 50 of the more ambitious Hoyas felt they would be in that category in 1975.

When asked what positions they ultimately expect to hold, nearly a third (41) of the 141 who answered the question named law. 24 expected to be doctors, and 40 listed either business or "business executive."

BB Gun Shots Wound Left Eye Of D. C. Girl, 12

Twelve-year-old Hildegarde Ehrman, of 4430 Garrison st. nw., last night was reported to be recovering from a left eye injury caused by glass shattered by the pellets of a BB gun.

Attendants at Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital said the glass fragments have been removed from her eye, which is mending.

Police reported the girl was looking through the glass kitchen door of her home when a 14-year-old neighborhood boy fired his gun. Police said they warned the parents of the boy.

Possession of an air rifle on private property is legal, police said, but carrying or using it on public space is illegal. A neighbor confiscated the boy's rifle and broke it up, police said they had learned.

15c Transit Fare Asked, No Passes

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked authority to raise fares to 15 cents, or six tokens for 80 cents, and to eliminate the weekly pass.

The firm told the District Public Utilities Commission the rate increase 14 months ago had proved inadequate and the recent wage hike granted by arbitration had put the firm in even worse shape financially.

The proposed boost is expected to bring in a million dollars in additional revenue—even if patronage declines as a result of the fare increase. This, plus economies, is expected to yield $1,649,000 additional operating income, putting the company in the black.

Present fares are 13 cents cash, three tokens for 35 cents, or $1.75 for an unlimited weekly pass. The increase would be 2 cents on cash fares and 1 2/3 cents on tokens and means the 100,000 persons now purchasing passes would have to pay other type fares.

The transit firm painted a gloomy picture of its financial situation and asked the PUC to authorize the boost effective January 22, without a formal hearing, as an emergency measure, or else to grant the fares and then hold a hearing.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan, who received the rate-hike petition yesterday morning, said no decision has been reached on this, but noted that such a request had never been granted by the PUC.

The company said the wage increase—which cost $1,170,000 a year plus $500,000 in retroactive pay—and the continuing decline in passenger traffic will result in no operating income by the end of the next month under present fares.

In fact, the company would have an operating deficit of not less than $159,000 by then, the petition warned.

The CTC recalled that the fare

Transit Stock Jumps $1.50 on D. C. Board

Common stock of Capital Transit Co. jumped $1.50 a share yesterday on the Washington Stock exchange, apparently reflecting news of the request for higher fares. At $27.50 a share, the transit stock was at a new three-year peak.

The stock had sold as low as $10 in 1947. When Louis E. Wolfson and his Florida associates bought controlling interest last year, they paid $20 a share.

All-time high for a share of transit stock was $40.50 in 1946.

Boy, 14, Believed Alone at Sea On 30-Ton Craft

Arbroath, Scotland, Jan. 11 (AP). A 14-year-old schoolboy was believed tonight to be alone aboard a 30-ton fishing boat in the rough North Sea.

More than 20 ships of the Arbroath fishing fleet scoured miles of the stormy waters off Scotland all day in a vain hunt.

Young Johnny Guthrie has been missing from his home since yesterday. Today his bicycle was found near the dock to which the 54-foot Girl Jean had been tied. The boat also had disappeared.

Officials linked the disappearance of the Girl Jean with that of the fair-haired schoolboy who always was hanging around the harbor looking longingly at the ships. He once had stowed away on hte Girl Jean and knew how she could be started and controlled by one man from the wheelhouse.

The fishing boat had enough fuel to take her 400 miles. One report said Johnny had told school chums he was going to France.

Rules Group Will Take Up FEPC Friday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A House program started shaping up last night as Democratic leaders moved to break enough legislation out of the Rules Committee to start the long-idle House to work.

Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (Ill.) ordered hearings Friday on eight separate bills, leading off with the controversial FEPC measure, following talks with Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.) and Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.).

Sabath said it was his own idea to open hearings on the FEPC bill, which is subject to House discharge action on January 23. He said there was general leadership agreement to hustle action on the other seven.

The House has had virtually no business before it since Congress convened on January 3, and though meeting today it is presently on a three-day recess schedule.

"I don't think we should fiddle around doing nothing until near the end of the session," Sabath told newsmen. "I don't intend to give Republicans an opportunity to say we've been here for two weeks without doing a thing."

To Consider Other Bills

In addition to the explosive FEPC bill, which has never yet hurdled the Rules Committee, Sabath said legislative committee chairmen have been invited before the committee Friday morning to testify on these other bills:

Truman-indorsed legislation increasing postage rates on postal cards, parcel post and second class mail.

One of the President's Point IV bills, guaranteeing private United States investments in underdeveloped areas abroad.

Legislation providing an emergency five-year program of grants and scholarships for education in the fields of medicine, osteopathy, dentistry, dental hygiene, public health and nursing professions.

An Administration measure increasing appropriations for United States participation in international organizations.

A bill permitting Government employes who retired prior to April 1, 1948, to obtain recently increased annuities and at the same time designate the surviving spouse to receive one half of the annuity up to $600.

Postal Workers Bill

A bill giving classified postal employes who entered the postal field service subsequent to their World War II military service credit toward automatic promotions for military service.

Legislation directing construction of VA hospital facilities to provide 16,000 additional beds.

The House meanwhile may get started next week on an Administration bill previously cleared by the Rules Committee, providing a long-range program of economic aid to Korea.

How much of this program is moved Friday by the Rules Committee may depend on what happens when hearings open on the lead-off FEPC bill.

If the usual Rules Committee FEPC stalemate develops, the chairman may proceed to less controversial bills on the list.

Lewis Orders Miners to Go Back to Pits

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis yesterday officially recognized a state of strike in a large segment of the soft coal industry and ordered the stay-away miners back to work.

An estimated 70,000 diggers who simply failed to show up for work this week are expected to return to the pits on a three-day work week basis, beginning next Monday, as a result of a "suggestion" by the United Mine Workers' leader.

"Will you please transmit to our members who are idle this week my suggestion that they resume production next Monday," Lewis telegraphed UMW district chieftains. In his customarily cryptic fashion, John L. did not elucidate on his one-sentence telegram. Union sources said, however, that the back-to-work "suggestion" referred to the three-day week imposed on the industry by Lewis in an effort to win an "improved" contract.

This week's "mysterious" outbreak of strikes hit mines in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Alabama, Utah, Virginia, Tennessee and Wyoming. Last week, 15,000 diggers stayed out in Illinois, and returned to the mines this week.

John D. Battle, spokesman for the National Coal Association, charged yesterday that "Lewis has set a pattern of sporadic strikes" as a tactic in forcing the operators to agree to increases in wages and the welfare fund royalty for his 480,000 miners. "There is no guarantee there won't be further stoppages," Battle said.

On Capitol Hill, six Senators initiated a joint resolution calling on the President to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act in the coal dispute. Signers of the resolution, considered for the time being to have little opportunity of passage, were all Republicans: Taft (Ohio), Ferguson (Mich.), Wiley (Wis.), Donnell (Mo.), Jenner (Ind.) and Martin (Pa.).

Representative Clarence E. Kilburn (R., N. Y.) joined in the growing congressional chorus for action against John L. Lewis. Kilburn wrote President Truman that he must share "the condemnation of our people" for permitting Lewis to continue the three-day work week.

White House Sedan to Have Writing Desk and Vanity Case

NYHT News Service

A fleet of 10 new limousines, one of which may well be the most luxurious car in the country, is being built for the White House, with delivery of the first of them scheduled for the end of this month, it was learned yesterday.

[They will have bulletproof glass. Motor, hood and sides will be heavily armored, the Associated Press reported.]

The cars—nine oversize sedans and one a super-convertible—are being custom-built by the Henny Motor Company, Freeport, Ill., under the direction of the Ford Motor Company, which will lease them to the government under a special arrangement by which the White House rotates cars on lease from the leading manufacturers.

A feature of all of the cars, unlike ready-made autos, will be headroom sufficient for the high silk hats which are a "must" for state occasions.

The special appointments being provided, except for the high-hat room and the two extra folding seats in each car, are the idea of the Ford Company and not of the White House. The company, it was learned, thought it would like to to something special for the White House.

All of the new cars will be Lincoln Cosmopolitans, with standard 8-cylinder engines and hydromatic drive. However, they will have a special 145-inch wheelbase, compared to the 125-inch wheelbase of the largest ready-made Lincoln, and will weigh more than 6000 pounds, compared to the 4400 pounds of the large ready-made sedans.

The sedan being prepared specially for the President will have such additional features as a vanity case, a thermos bottle arrangement and a writing desk and pad set. It will also have special side running boards to accommodate the Secret Service men who guard the President, and side danger lights.

The convertible, similar to older ones now in use by the White House, also will have special side running boards and lights. Because of its length, a special automatic top had to be designed by the Ford engineering laboratories, at Dearborn, Mich., where all of the cars are designed.

All 10 cars will have separate radios and heaters for the front and back, as well as an intercommunication system to talk to the drvier. The Secret Service will install short wave radio in some of the cars.

60 Million Waterfront Help Urged

Members of the Washington Board of Trade were asked last night to help create demand for enactment of a 60-to-70-million-dollar Federal program to give Washington an "attractive, healthy waterfront."

Louis P. Bohraus, chairman of the board's river and harbor committee, said a 1935 congressionally approved plan for waterfront improvement is seven million dollars short of completion and a survey of additional needs will add 60 to 70 millions to this cost.

Speaking at the board's general membership meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, Bohraus said the District Engineer had been authorized to start the survey immediately and prepare plans and specifications during a two-year study. The board will set up a special subcommittee to work with the official, Behraus said.

He said the survey will cover terminal and connecting rail facilities for heavy freight traffic, a municipal sailing base, additional public esplanades, a sea scout base, municipal canoe bases, additional yacht bases, and "Negro boating facilities on the Anacostia River above Benning Bridge."

The board official said one firm is now negotiating to charter a

10,000-ton steamer for regularly scheduled cruise service from Washington to the West Indies or other locations.

At the same meeting, former Postmaster General James A. Farley declared that "a Sears, Roebuck or a Montgomery Ward catalogue, if we could distribute one to every inhabitant of the globe, would be better propaganda for the American way than all the propaganda in the world."

(Editor's Note: Farley's statement was more fact than prophesy. Last year hundreds of Yugoslavs lined up outside the window of the United States Information Service in Belgrade, where a Sears, Roebuck catalogue was on display.)

Now chairman of the Coca-Cola Export Corp., Farley said, "The more people we expose to American products the better they will understand the kind of people we are."

The chairman of the board's World Trade Committee, former Representative Jennings Randolph, reported the establishment of the International Trade Mart Association to create a world trade center here.

Randolph said the group will soon begin to process applications for charter memberships "which will provide the necessary finances to begin operations."

Line Says Arrow Won't Try Again To Make Shanghai

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—The Isbrandtsen Co., Inc., said tonight it is abandoning its efforts to get its ship, the Flying Arrow, into Nationalist-patrolled Shanghai.

The company said in a statement that the ship has been ordered to Tsingtao, which it called the nearest safe port.

Tsingtao also is Communist-held. However, the company said it did not anticipate any opposition by the Nationalist government to the Flying Arrow's docking there.

The Flying Arrow was heavily shelled Monday as it tried to make its way into Shanghai against the objections of the Nationalist government.

(In Washington, the Navy said orders to two U. S. destroyers to stand by the Flying Arrow had been withdrawn, and that the ships were directed to leave the Yangtze estuary. The destroyers had helped the Flying Arrow make repairs.)

Reds Seize Beachhead On Hainan

Taipei, Formosa (Thursday), Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Chinese Communist regulars have landed on Hainan Island and established a beachhead on the southwest coast, Nationalist dispatches reported today.

The invaders hit the beaches after a 150-mile water trip from Weichao Island, where the main Red amphibious assault troops were reported concentrating.

Pro-Communist guerillas had moved down from the mountains and seized control of a 30-mile stretch of the coast in a well-timed operation, the reports said.

Gen. Hsueh Yueh, Nationalist commander, thus far has made no move toward the invading Communists but was concentrating on strengthening defenses on the north side of the island.

Army to Curb Segregation In New Policy

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army has adopted a new racial policy providing for the integration of Negroes throughout the service on a gradual, long-range basis.

It will end, in principle, the traditional policy of strictly segregated units and result in the assignment, in the very near future, of a limited number of highly qualified Negro soldiers to white troop units.

They will be few in number and confined to "scarce specialists" for the time being. Existing separate white and Negro companies and battalions will not be broken up and will continue generally segregated indefinitely probably for years, officials said.

But qualified Negro non-coms and soldiers holding "military occupational specialties" will not be denied an assignment to a job calling for their qualifications where there are openings in white troop units and none in Negro units, as now.

And the new policy sets integration as an eventual goal and contemplates that the Army move toward it as fast as military efficiency and the well-being of the service will permit.

Baltimore Schools Ordered to Burn Soviet Literature

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP). — The city's department of education announced today it has directed high school principals to burn Russian publications addressed to school libraries.

The Allegany County superintendent of schools has taken similar action.

In Frederick County, Superintendent Eugene W. Pruitt several weeks ago said he had decided against such measures.

(In Washington, Assistant School Superintendent Norman J. Nelson said December 9 he had confiscated copies of the Soviet Information Bulletin mailed to schools. The school board subsequently split over his action—Editor's Note.)

Has No Fear of War

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft again demanded yesterday that the United States use its Navy to block a possible Communist invasion of Formosa from the Chinese mainland.

Taft hit back angrily at recent warnings by Administration Senators that such action would involve the United States in a new world war.

"There is not the slightest evidence," he told the Senate, "that Russia will go to war with us because we interfere with a crossing to Formosa.

"It is hardly possible to see how the Chinese Communists by themselves can begin a war against the United States, or why they should do so."

And he urged calling the Joint Chiefs of Staff before a Senate committee to say whether they thought Formosa must be kept from Communist control. On this point he won the powerful support of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee.

"I cannot feel that I have obtained adequate information without the testimony of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," said Vandenberg, who had listened to Secretary Acheson's all-day testimony before the committee on Tuesday.

Vandenberg said he wanted the Joint Chiefs' views on the China situation in general and on Formosa in particular, and added emphatically, "I consider it not only pertinent but indispensable."

While the Republican assault on Administration policy was being renewed in the Senate, Secretary Acheson was giving another all-day survey of the situation in Europe and Asia—this time for the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

After the meeting Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) firmly declined to tell reporters anything of what the Secretary had said. The reporters reminded him that Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate committee had given them a point-by-point summary of the Secretary's testimony on the Czechs Order U. S. Relief Group Out of Country

Prague, Jan. 11 (AP).—Henry Levy, director of the American Joint Distribution Committee in Czechoslovakia, was ordered today to leave the country and to liquidate the Jewish relief agency by the end of the month.

His notice from the Foreign Ministry came less than a month after the arrest of Israel Jacobson, director of the same agency in Hungary. Jacobson was expelled from Hungary December 28.

The order for Levy's expulsion apparently was a move to get rid of Western-sponsored international organizations here and in eastern Europe.

The International Relief Organization director said the Government had suggested that he close the IRO offices by January 15. He said he probably would get his orders to leave Thursday.

Los Angeles Area Shaken by Quake

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—A jarring earthquake shook a wide band of southern California at 1:41 p. m. (PST) today. It was felt inland some 75 miles to San Bernardino. There were no reports of damage.

Dr. Charles F. Richter of California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, said the quake did not appear strong enough to have caused much loss, and probably centered "not more than 15 miles" from Pasadena.

D. C. Breeding Bureaucratic Lineage, Anthropologist Says

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

A succession of "hereditary bureaucrats"—in which the Government, generation unto generation, will be run by sons and daughters of Government workers—is gradually beginning to develop in Washington.

This came yesterday from Dr. Ralph Linton, eminent anthropologist of Yale, who supplied this description of the "typical" old-hand civil service employe:

"Unusually honest, efficient . . . much involved with minutiae . . . largely devoid of imagination."

Children of Government workers are being "bred up to office routines" and are learning from their parents the ropes of getting Government jobs, he said.

But mainly the hereditary structure is being built because of low Government salaries, which are keeping "fresh blood" and "better talent" out of Government.

Result, said he, is that with exceptions here and there, "the Government is being run by average, run-of-the-deck men."

"It will lead in the long run to a stabilized society with steadily increasing Government control, to a reactionary society in which the hereditary bureaucrats will be opposed to any change—bureaucrats never like to interfere with the status quo.

"It will lead to more and more people in the Government, to where eventually nearly everyone will be working for the Government."

U. S. Renews Offer to Russia On Settlement of Differences

The State Department renewed a long-standing offer yesterday to try to settle existing quarrels with Russia, but not by going behind the backs of other countries concerned.

"As has been stated many times," said Press Officer Michael J. McDermott, "the United States is ready and willing to set down with the Russians in an attempt to settle outstanding differences in any appropriate forum."

McDermott said the occasion for restating this position was a German news agency report that negotiations were going on "to bridge the east-west gap." He said the department knew of no formal or informal negotiations of the sort.

McDermott was asked whether the Soviet government had asked recently, directly or indirectly, for discussion with the United States. He answered that there had been no such intimation from Moscow, as far as he or the State Department knew.

The chief problems, McDermott said, "concern Soviet relations with the rest of the world, and not just with the United States as such."

"We have had differences with the Russians that you all know about," he told reporters — to cite a few, the case of Mrs. Kasenkina and the Gubitchev case. Such things as these could be settled by representatives of the United States and the U.S.S.R.

"But we are not going to sit down with the Russians and attempt to impose bilateral solutions to problems affecting other countries."

Consul's Report

McCarran Cites Letter On DP Fraud

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Continuing his running battle with the Displaced Persons Commission, Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) yesterday made public an official statement that ten displaced persons apparently resorted to fraud to obtain U. S. entrance visas.

The statement was made in a letter to the Secretary of State from Sam E. Woods, American consul general in Munich, Germany.

McCarran, Senate Judiciary Committee chairman, produced the result of the consul general's investigation in answer to Chairman Ugo Carusi of the Displaced Persons Commission.

Charges He Was Called "Liar"

McCarran accused Carusi of calling him a "liar" and said the public must be the judge.

[The New York Herald Tribune last night quoted Carusi as saying that the clear intent of the statement was to brand Cutler's charges as including "simple lies" and not to accuse Senator McCarran of being a liar.

["We didn't call him a liar," Mr. Carusi said. "We had no intention to and there would have been no justification for it."—Editor's Note.]

Carusi tangled with McCarran Tuesday night after the Senator, who is fighting President Truman's liberalized DP program, publicized testimony by John W. Cutler, an employe of the DP commission's regional offices in Munich and Butzbach.

At that time, Carusi said that Cutler's complaint that the DP program in Germany was shot with "irregularities" was an outright lie. As for McCarran's motives in making public the charges, Carusi said he preferred to believe that the Senator himself believed Cutler's charges were groundless.

McCarran gave his reaction as he left a committee meeting at which "security questions" affecting the displaced person program were the chief topic. On hand were Immigration Chief Watson B. Miller and Herve J. L'Heureux, head of the State Department's visa section.

"For the first time in my career in public life," the Senator said, "I have been called a liar by a Federal official. I rather smiled at it."

He then handed out the Woods letter regarding the possibility of fraud in connection with visas obtained by displaced persons in Amberg, Germany.

In the letter, dated September 9, 1949, the consul general reported to the State Department that 10 visas had been issued to displaced persons who were apparently ineligible.

"These persons have all made statements under oath in their visa applications which subsequent documentary evidence had shown to be probably false, and in each case the eligibility of the person concerned was dependent upon the truth of these statements," the report said.

Charges Investigated

Woods reported that the military government was investigating charges of bribery of a member of the city government of Schwandorf by a prospective visa applicant.

"The accused is said to have paid 50 marks through the wife of the president of the Jewish committee of the town, in an effort to have the city records which show residence in Schwandorf adjusted so as to make him eligible under Public Law 774," he reported.

"This investigation has shown that a number of displaced persons who had already departed for the United States had previously caused their police records in Schwandorf to be changed, and further that upon their presentation for a visa the statements which they made under oath did not correspond with records in Schwandorf."

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 11—The Maryland Farm Bureau opposes bringing any more displaced persons into this country, and wants drastic laws to govern those already here.

In the final session of its convention here today, the bureau, which claims 12,000 members among Maryland's 25,000 farmers, voted:

1. To "oppose President Truman's plan to increase the number of displaced persons coming into this country."
2. To "recommend that the law be amended to make it mandatory that those persons who have chosen to be placed on farms remain on that farm or other farms for at least two years."
3. "That a registration of all these persons be maintained so that their whereabouts can always be ascertained."
4. That, "in the event any displaced persons should prove to be undesirable they should immediately be deported."

Displeased at Experience

Only one delegate opposed the resolution. He declared that the two-year period to require work on farms was too short. John D. Roop of Baltimore, representing the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP) which sends free food shipments to DPs and others overseas, urged that the resolution be defeated. Although a farm bureau member, he was ruled out of order because he was not a delegate.

The resolution began by registering the bureau's "displeasure in the experience that farmers have had with DPs during the last year.

"We welcome honest and experienced farm laborers from Europe," it states. "Our experience thus far is that they are not sufficiently screened as to agricultural ability, and that the farmer has no assurance that the DPs will remain with him for any definite period."

According to farm leaders, about 500 families have been brought to Maryland farms so far. Only about one third are still there. Most are Ukrainians.

Hal Townsend of Prince Georges County told the bureau that many who were screened as farmers had been "doctors, beauticians, florists, etc., in Europe, and had no agricultural ability." Many left their farm sponsors within a few months after arriving.

The sponsors pay the travel expenses of the DPs from the nearest port to their farms. In Maryland pay for the DPs has ranged from $50 to $70 a month, plus living quarters and some food.

Many have proved excellent farmers, some leaders asserted. A full report on the DP program is in the hands of Governor W. Preston Lane, and is expected to be released son.

Other Actions by Bureau

The bureau also:

1. Wants to prevent the sale of oleomargarine "in imitation of butter," but approves removal of all Federal taxes. In debating this measure, the bureau took a crack at the University of Maryland. One woman delegate said margarine was served to students at the university. As a result a resolution praising all "departments and divisions" of the university was deleted.
2. Found fault with the recent antitrust suit brought by the Attorney General against the A. & P. stores. "The food chains," it said, "purchase and distribute large amounts of Maryland agricultural products and have on numerous occasions helped to relieve surpluses. Our opinion is that bigness does not constitute monopoly."
3. Voted to study legislation that would govern roadside markets, buildings, signs, etc.
4. Urged that a non-Communist oath be required of all candidates for office and employes of educational institutions.
5. Asked for lower license fees for farm trucks than for other vehicles.
6. Pledged support to the Monocacy River Watershed Council, which plans to make the Monocacy Valley a model for water control and antipollution of the stream.
7. View with alarm the money spent on welfare "during one of the most prosperous times in history. We vigorously oppose direct relief to adults who are able to work but refuse to do so."
8. Opposed increases in telephone rates. "The present rate make this service practically a luxury," the bureau said.
9. Voted to study the extension of Old Age and Survivors Insurance to farmers. Voted to favor inclusion of employes of farm cooperatives and other farm organizations. Opposition to extending coverages to farmers was based on relief it also would be extended to farm labor.
10. Opposed daylight saving time.

2315 GI Dead Returned

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Maryland Veterans' Committee set up to help bring home the bodies of military personnel killed in World War II announced today it has about finished its job. Since November of 1947 the committee has participated in the return of 2315 bodies.

Army to Curb Segregation

new policy hail it as the greatest step toward equality of opportunity and treatment taken in the Army.

The new policy, set forth in a revised circular on utilization of Negro manpower, has not yet been announced or promulgated to the Service. But The Washington Post learns that Army Secretary Gordon Gray, who has approved the circular, explained it to a conference of Army personnel officers from all theaters meeting at the Pentagon yesterday.

It will be put before President Truman's Committee on Equality of Treatment and Opportunity in the Armed Services at a meeting scheduled for Saturday. Members of the group, which is headed by Justice Charles Fahy of the U. S. Court of Appeals here, are familiar with it and their eventual concurrence is expected.

Navy and AF Had Acted

However, some questions of language, though not of substance, raised by the Committeemen, may delay an immediate announcement of the new policy, Army officers understood. Secretary Gray is believed desirous of having the indorsement of the Fahy group, if possible.

Adoption of the policy brings the Army into general conformity with the Navy and Air Force, which earlier adopted a program of integriation. heir problems in the field of racial relationship, however, have been recognized as less difficult than those of the Army. Sixty thousand of the Army's 640,000 officers and men are Negroes, with only 17,000 Negroes out of 502,000 Navy and Marine personnel, and 25,000 out of 417,000 Air Force men. Most of the Navy's Negroes, moreover, are in the stewards and commissary branches, and those in the Air Force largely are ground personnel.

However, the process of integration in both services has proceeded smoothly and is proving workable, officials say.

The number of Air Force units containing Negroes increased from 273 last June 30 to 954 on September 30, while separate Negro units dropped from 106 to 81.

Earlier Move Criticized

Last year, the Army announced a liberalization of its policy, opening all schools and military occupational specialties to all soldiers regardless of race. But as Negroes qualified for such specialties could be assigned only to Negro troop units and "overhead" jobs at posts, this was criticized as not being responsive to President Truman's demand for racial equality in the services.

Generally speaking, officers said, Negroes assigned to post overhead jobs have messed separately from white soldiers and are assigned to separate barracks. It is contemplated, however, that the qualified noncommissioned specialists assigned to white troop units under the new policy will be entirely integrated as far as billeting, messing and command are concerned.

The opening of white troop units to Negroes holding special qualifications meets this objection for the time being, it is understood. Still under study is a fourth proposal of the Fahy Committee. It would abolish the present quota system, in which Negro enlistments are limited to 10 percent of the total strength and substitute therefore a quota system of intelligence ratings not based on race. This would draw Negroes of higher intelligence and education into the Army, instead of continuing those of lower mental ratings, and still maintain the present general proportion of races, it is argued.

Mrs. Mitchell Heads Public Health Council

Mrs. Harold Mitchell of Laytonsville has been installed as president of the Public Health Lay Council of Montgomery County.

Other officers installed at the quarterly meeting are Mrs. Robert Carnie, Kensington, vice president; Mrs. C. G. VanEmon, Barnesville, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. PGad Morehouse, Silver Spring, assistant treasurer.

Motions by Maragon Must Be in by Jan. 21

Attorney Irvin Goldstein yesterday entered his appearance as counsel for John Maragon, the former White House habitue accused of perjury in the congressional investigation of alleged influence peddling here.

Goldstein was given until January 21 to submit pretrial motions in the case. Trial has been set for February 20 in District Court.

Republicans in Radio Roundup Assail Program of Spending

Republicans attacked President Truman last night as the greatest spender in history and said his legislative program, if enacted, will turn the United States into a socialized state.

They spoke in a Nation-wide program of speeches and interviews prepared for delivery over the ABC radio network.

Representative Brown (R., Ohio) said the Truman Administration is spending $80,000 a minute and taking in only $70,000.

"Harry Truman is the top public spender of all time," he added. "He is now spending annually over four times as much to run our Federal Government as Franklin Roosevelt ever spent in any peacetime year—and he was no slouch of a spender himself."

Guy Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, led off the program from New York. He said advocates of the alien philosophy of an all-powerful state now occupy high official positions in Washington.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican Senate leader, said his party will fight to upset a forecast made by Lenin, then dictator of Russia, that the Communists some day would force the United States to spend itself into destruction.

Wherry added:

"Instead of increasing the tax burden, as President Truman proposes, to finance spendthrift socialism, the sound, sensible course is to repeal business-blocking, wartime excise taxes, cut the cost of Government and balance expenditures with revenue."

Speaking from Topeka, Governor Carlson of Kansas said everyone realizes that price supports in some form must be used to keep prices from dropping too sharply. But so far, he said, he has found nothing but double talk in the farm plan of Agriculture Secretary Brannan.

U. S. Asked to End Japan Occupation

Delegate Is Cause Of Red Walkout

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DR. TING FU TSIANG, Chinese Nationalist delegate to the United Nations, January president of the Security Council, ruled to defer action on the Russian proposal to expel the Chinese Nationalist delegation. When the council upheld him, Russian Delegate Jakob A. Malik led the Soviets out

Colombo, Ceylon, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—India's Prime Minister Pandit Nehru reportedly called on the United States to withdraw her occupation troops from Japan during today's closed session of the Commonwealth foreign ministers.

Britain's Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin also urged that a peace treaty with Japan be concluded as swiftly as possible.

Nehru, on the third day of the conference, warned that prolonged occupation may drive Japan to communism, informed sources said. Nehru, who has made similar statements before India's Parliament and press conferences was quoted:

"You cannot keep 80 million people under military occupation forever. If the Western powers are worried about communism in East Asia, the sensible thing would be not to drive the Japanese to communism by a long occupation."

The U. S. is not a party to this conference which is confined to the foreign ministers and economic experts of Britain, Canada, India, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand, Ceylon and South Africa.

All the ministers were said to have agreed that every country which fought in the war against Japan should be allowed to take part in the final Japanese peace settlement.

On the question of the treaty Bevin said it is "eminently desirable as soon as possible" because of "urgent economic considerations." By "economic considerations," Bevin meant Far East trade.

Australia, New Zealand and Canada also want to deal with Japan directly, which will not be possible until conclusion of the peace treaty.

The ministers agreed the United States must have the decisive voice in the treaty, since it bore the biggest burden in the Pacific war.

Australia and New Zealand said the United States must give specific guarantees that any future sign of Japanese aggression would be curbed.

Kline Denies Offer Of Cabinet Post If Dewey Had Won

Allan B. Kline, president of the powerful American Farm Bureau Federation, yesterday scotched frequent reports that he opposes Administration farm policies because he had been the Republican choice for Secretary of Agriculture.

At a luncheon-press conference Kline said that during the 1948 presidential campaign he was in the office of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Republican candidate, only once. He asserted that he never was approached by Governor Dewey "or his cohorts" with an offer of the agricultural post.

As for campaigning in his home State of Iowa for Governor Dewey, Mr. Kline asserted that he did not "make a speech, write a letter or telephone in his behalf." He added that he did "absolutely nothing."

In an attack on the Brannan plan for agriculture, Mr. Kline described it as "ideal for politics." It promises "high prices for the farmers and cheap prices for the consumers while assuring that the plan won't cost anybody very much," he said. The Brannan plan would support farm prices yet let agricultural commodities find their own price level on the consumer market.

Study of Races By U. N. Will Aim At Discrimination

Lake Success, Jan. 11 (AP).—A world-wide scientific study of races and racial relations was announced by the United Nations today as part of a fight against discrimination toward minorities.

The study will be one of the chief activities of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, that group told Secretary-General Trygve Lie.

The report came as Western countries answered Soviet bloc charges that discrimination against minorities was rife everywhere except in the Soviet Union. The charges were voiced in a meeting of a U. N. subcommission on the prevention of discrimination and protection of minorities.

Reds Reported Training Men In China to Take Over Tibet

London, Jan. 11 (AP).—The signs grew more ominous today for Tibet, the cloud-wrapped land in central Asia ruled by the boy Dalai Lama whose astrologers have warned him against foreigners.

Reports from Bhutan state said a Communist puppet government for Tibet has been formed in the neighborhood Chinese Province of Chinghai.

The Bhutan reports said divisions of Tibetans are being trained for the puppet government. A treaty with the regime provides that Chinese Communists, upon "liberation of Tibet," will administer its foreign affairs and be given sole rights for mining its mnerals, believed to include uranium, the dispatch said.

At the same time the Chinese Communist news agency in Peiping broadcast renewed threats to invade Tibet. It said the war on China's mainland is at an end "with the exception of Tibet, which has yet to be liberated."

The Chinese Communists have made previous threats against Tibet, whose 24,000-foot mountain peaks and 12,000-foot-high valleys make it the highest country in the world.

Last September Peiping broadcasts first disclosed a purpose to "liberate" Tibet. Last Sunday Moscow's newspapers, Izvestia and Pravda, repeated the threats.

The primitive nation of about three million Buddhist monks and peasants is chiefly important because it borders on India, disputed Kashmir and the huge Chinese Province of Sinkiang.

It is without roads, automobiles, electricity or industry. Two years ago the first Tibetan mission to leave the country since 1913 visited the United States seeking to sell wool and yak-tail hairs for wigs and Santa Claus whiskers.

Cat Weighed Almost as Much As Starved Boy, Court Told

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—A sobbing young mother and her husband, both well dressed, stood in court today accused of starving to death their 3-year-old son.

The prosecutor told the court the charge against Guy and Mary Scielzo, each 29, "equals any horror story coming out of the concentration camps of Germany."

The son who died was Guy, jr. Another child, Vincenza, 4, is suffering from malnutrition.

Two other children were well fed and well treated. They were Michael, 1, who died January 3 of acute appendicitis, and Nicolette, 5, now with an aunt.

The parents, arrested last night, were held without bail today for a hearing Monday.

The prosecutor. Assistant District Attorney George P. Monaghan, told the court the parents lavished everything on two children, "caring little for the other two."

"The room in which this little boy was found was infested with lice," Monaghan said. "For weeks before little Guy was found he had nothing to eat but a little water and a few little pieces of chocolate.

"The father earns between $57 and $75 a week, and told us that he gave the mother $30 a week for food. He certainly is well fed, and it is obvious that she is overfed."

Police quoted the father as saying he knew his wife was not feeding the two children properly, but he could do nothing about it.

Monaghan said of the father:

"He admits that for four weeks he never took the trouble to look at his dying son. . . .

"When he died he weighed only 14 pounds. In contrast, the cat weighed almost as much as Guy." . . .

Authorities quoted the mother as saying she tried to feed the children and when they wouldn't eat she gave the food to the cat.

Civil War, Aided by Outsiders, Unlikely for Tito, Allen Says

Paris, Jan. 11 (AP).—George Allen, new United States Ambassador to Yugoslavia, said today that "a civil war supported by outside agitation is unlikely in Yugoslavia."

He said, however, that if any such trouble did start "it would be a matter of very serious concern to the United States."

Allen said Tito's government had made no requests for American military aid "and until it does the question does not arise."

U. S. May Help to Meet Independence Threat

By The Associated Press

The United States probably would give limited military assistance to Marshall Tito if the Soviet-Communist bloc should begin using armed force to try to crush Yugoslavia's independence.

While officials hope this won't be necessary, the National Security Council is reported to have cleared a stand-by program of measures the United States might take. These aim at the military field, supplementing aid already being given Tito in the economic and political phases of his struggle.

In the light of the council's action, the State Department has determined what specific steps it would recommend to President Truman if an emergency arose.

The Security Council, headed by the President, is the Nation's top policy-making body in foreign policy. Its members include Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson.

Paul Porter Says Jews, Arabs Spend Too Much on Arms

Paul A. Porter, former head of the Palestine Conciliation Commission warned yesterday that the Holy Land is in an "uneasy armistice" and the Arab nations and Israel are running an arms race for "some future conflict."

Speaking at a Rotary Club luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel, Porter said the situation in the Near East is still "very volatile" and could develop into a "major crisis, depending on the quality of Western statesmanship." The area is open either to progress under Western ideals or to exploitation under nineteenth century type imperialism, Porter declared. America must support the legitimate aspirations of all parties there or be faced with greater problems than there are even now, he said.

Porter, who resigned from the commission after reaching an impasse in trying to conciliate political difficulties between Israel and the Arabs, said Americans must be concerned with political stability in the Holy Land.

"Populations are on the move as reading and writing become common and with them come new ideas," Porter said. "No longer do these hundreds of millions assume they must go on without change, and they will not stay where they are now."

Taft Hits Point Four Plans; House Hearings Open Today

The cost of President Truman's expanded "Point Four" program for developing the world's backward areas seems "almost beyond calculation," Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) warned yesterday.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee will open hearings on the measure today at 10:30 a. m.

If Mr. Truman meant what he said in his State of the Union message in promising aid "in their lives" to make scientific and economic advances availbale to the back peoples of the world, Taft declared, the cost would be astronomical.

"It has taken us years and years to get where we are," Taft said. "If the President is going to make all of these scientific and economic advances available to them in this generation, it will take billions and billions of dollars to do it.

"Frankly I don't know what he is talking about. Maybe it's all hooey on his part. But if we are going to bring all of the underdeveloped areas of the world up to our standard of living, the cost seems beyond calculation."

Jap Warships to Be Sold For Scrap This Month

Kure, Japan, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Four Japanese warships, including the 40,000-ton battleship Haruna once erroneously reported sunk by Capt. Colin Kelly, will be sold for scrap this month.

The Haruna, two 42,000-ton aircraft carriers and a 10,000-ton cruiser have been rusting off Kure since 1945, when they were put out of action by American air attacks.

State Dept. Names Humelsine To High Administrative Post

Thirty-four-year-old Carlisle H. Humelsine, of 4215 Van Buren st., University Park, Md., was named yesterday as No. 2 man in charge of administering the State Department.

He was appointed Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for administration, and thus second in command to Assistant Secretary John E. Peurifoy.

Humelsine is one of a growing list of young men whom the State Department is putting in top policy-making or administrative posts. The department nominated him last week for the Arthur S. Flemming Award, to be presented by the Junior Chamber of Commerce to the young official who has made the greatest contribution to Government service.

For four years after graduating from the University of Maryland in 1937, Humelsine served as an assistant to the President of the University. In wartime he was assistant to Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and rose from the rank of lieutenant to that of colonel.

He came to the State Department in 1946, serving first as director of the Office of Departmental Administration, and later, during Marshall's term as Secretary, as organizer and first director of the Executive Secretariat in the Secretary's office.

In his new post Humelsine succeeds Charles M. Hulten, who was named last week to be the first general manager of the State Department's world-wide information and educational exchange programs.

Taft Insists U. S. Use Navy To Block Formosa Invasion

previous day, and asked him whether there was any good reason for not doing the same.

"The reason," Kee answered, "is the difference between Senator Connally's method of doing business and mine. We gave the Secretary an assurance that he could talk freely and that what he said would be held inviolate."

He did say, though, that he did not get the impression from Acheson of an "impregnable" American security line in the Pacific, which Connally had quoted him as having mentioned on Tuesday.

Kee also said the Secretary "dodged nothing and answered every question at length"—including questions from Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), probably the most persistent of all House critics of the Administration's policies in China.

Acheson Before Press Club

Acheson is expected to break his long public silence on Far Eastern issues in a luncheon speech today at the National Press Club.

He was told about Taft's speech as he left the House committee room, but declined to comment on it. He is bound to answer it indirectly, at least, if his speech today has anything to say about China.

For Taft's attack went much further than Formosa; it riddled the whole of the State Department's policy toward China, and it went so far as to say:

"The State Department has been guided by a left-wing group who obviously have wanted to get rid of Chiang Kai-shek, and were willing at least to turn China over to the Communists for that purpose. They have, in effect, defied the general policy in China laid down by Congress."

Deep Inconsistency Seen

Taft's thesis was that there has been a deep inconsistency in the American policy of "containing" communism.

"We sent our military aid and our officers into Greece, although it might easily have involved us in war," Taft argued. "We have given military aid to Turkey and to Iran . . . In undertaking the air lift in Germany, we certainly risked war with Russia in order to maintain unimpaired our position in Berlin. We are asked to appropriate billions of dollars to arm western Europe, although there is no evidence that at the present time the Russians contemplate any military attack in that area.

"We have given notice to Russia by the adoption of the Atlantic Pact that if its troops advance across the boundaries of Italy or the American or British zones of Austria or Germany, or Denmark or Norway, it will find itself at war with us.

Have Not Hesitated Before

"In our policy of laying down the law, 'thus far you shall go and no farther,' we have not hesitated to risk war . . . In China, for some reason, the State Department has pursued a different policy from that followed throughout the rest of the world."

Taft said he sad "not the slightest doubt" that "the proper kind of sincere aid" to the Chinese Nationalists a few years ago could have stopped communism in China.

"In recent months it has, of course, been very doubtful," he went on, "whether aid to the Nationalist government could be effective, and no one desires to waste American efforts. But Formosa is a place where a small amount of aid, and at very small cost, can prevent the further spread of communism."

The Senator said the Formosan people probably would vote for an independent Formosan republic if they had the chance, and therefore the status of the island should be kept free for determination in the peace treaty with Japan.

Czech Consul Decides To Remain in France

Nice, France, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Ladislav Hudak, former Czech consul in Marseille, said today he and three consulate employes had decided to remain in France rather than return to Communist-dominated Czechoslovakia. He said the Czech consul in Algiers also had decided not to return.

Hudak said he thought the Communist government in Prague was eliminating intellectuals from important posts little by little. He said he understood about 100 Czech diplomats have dceided to remain abroad rather than return home.

De Gasperi Resigns To Try New Cabinet

Rome, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Premier Alcide de Gasperi and his cabinet resigned tonight, in what was billed as a political maneuver to strengthened his cabinet.

The decision was made public shortly after an estimated 50,000 workers rallied here under banners demanding "blood for blood" to protest the labor riot at Modena Monday in which six workers were killed.

Communists were expected to seize on the resignation to create a crisis by demanding the ouster of Interior Minister Mario Scelba as "a necessity for internal peace."

De Gasperi called the cabinet into session at the same time the workers were demontrating.

First the Ministers heard a report by Scelba on the Modena violence. He accused the Communists of stirring up the trouble. Then the Ministers approved the 1950 budget.

Their formal resignations will be presented to President Luigi Einaudi Thursday. Finaudi is expected to reappoint De Gasperi at once to head his sixth cabinet in four years.

De Gasperi, who leads Italy's diminant Christian Democratic Party, made known his intention to reshuffle the coalition government when the rightwing Socialists decided last week to rejoin the administration.

Thousands who stopped work at 3 p. m. at the start of a Communist-called four-hour general strike gathered in the Piazza Del Popolo in a mass demonstration.

Krupp Works Tool Removal Is Halted

Essen, Germany, Jan. 11 (AP).—A halt has been ordered in the shipment of huge machine tools from the Krupp Steel Works to 14 nations as reparations, British sources said today.

The approximately 1200 remaining pieces of machinery, weighing up to 150 tons each, are tentatively scheduled to remain in West Germany to help its economic recovery, the sources said. All are classified as "nonwar" machines.

Most of the machinery has been going to France and Yugoslavia.

Latin America Got $215 Millions in '49 In World Bank Aid

Latin American republics got 215 million dollars in economic help from the World Bank and the Export-Import Bank during 1949, Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller estimated yesterday.

This figure does not include an additional 10 million which, Miller estimated, reached Latin America through the Institute of Inter-American Affairs and through the State Department's cultural and educational exchange.

Miller leaves next week for Havana to met with the American Ambassadors from the Caribbean area. Next month he plans to visit Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay, and will attend a similar conference of American Ambassadors at Rio de Janeiro.

It's 'Springter Time'

The Washington Post

Bettie Jacobs, 23, of 1910 16th st. nw., admires cherry blossoms

A few naive and guileless cherry trees around the Tidal Basin put their trust in the sun rather than the calendar yesterday and burst into bloom.

But, said the weatherman, they are due for withering disillusionment early today. The temperature is due to skid to about 35 degrees, with 28 in the suburbs. They still may pick up heart again later today, because the forecast is for "mostly cloudy, rather mild, high in the upper 40's.

And Friday, more warm weather, such as broke records on four different days this month, is due here from the South.

Edward J. Kelly, special assistant in National Capital Parks, who is Uncle Sam's cherry blossom expert, didn't know yesterday that some of his charges had jumped the gun on the calendar, until reporters told him.

"There's no cause for alarm yet," he said, "that the weather will kill the usual spring display of cherry blossoms. Those trees make their buds in the fall, and they stay dormant through the winter. Even if some are moving toward bloom, they'll stop as soon as more cold weather comes along, and wait until spring to burst out."

High temperature yesterday was 52, at 2:50 p. m. It set no record. On January 11, 1928, the mercury climbed to 65.

Industries' Attack Launches British Election Campaign

London, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Britain's parliamentary election campaign opened today with a blast by industry against the Labor Government's sweeping nationalization program.

Within a few hours after the announcement that the long awaited election would be held February 23, sugar and cement interests announced a last ditch fight against nationalization of their industries.

Practical quarters forecast nationalization would be the chief issue in the fight between the ruling Laborites and Winston Churchill's Conservatives. They forecast also that the campaign would be the bitterest in 25 years.

The determination of the Labor Party to nationalize the great iron and steel industries is expected to play a big part.

But the fight opened with statements by the sugar and cement interests in anticipation that, if labor won the election, their industries would be nationalized soon.

Lord Lyle, head of the great Tate and Lyle sugar combine, announced at a press conference he would circulate a national petition against nationalization of the sugar industry.

George Earle, chairman of the Portland Cement Manufacturers Association, said all his stockholders would be asked to work against nationalization.

Anticipating vigorous action by private industries in the Conservatives' fight against nationalization, the government has threatened to charge industrial propaganda expenses against the campaign allowances set by law for candidates.

The Conservative Daily Express reported there was dissension in the Labor Party over Prime Minister Clement Attlee's choice of February 23 for the election. According to the Daily Express, a strong Labor Party faction wanted to delay the election until June.

Funchal, Madeira Islands, Jan. 11 (UP).—British Conservative Leader Winston Churchill decided today to cut short his vacation here and return to London Thursday for the election campaign which he hopes will restore him to power.

State Pounds Psychiatrist In Hiss Trial

New York, Jan. 11 (NYHT).—Dr. Carl A. L. Binger admitted under cross-examination today that many details which he had found significant in the life of Whittaker Chambers might have had less psychiatric significance if the facts were as described by Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy rather than as described by Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross.

But in answer to Murphy's final question, Binger said that even taking into consideration everything that had been said on cross-examination as well as his direct testimony and all his other observations of Chambers, he still believes Chambers is "suffering from a disorder of character known as psychopathic personality."

Dr. Binger was on the witness stand for the fourth day in the perjury trial of Alger Hiss. Chambers, key prosecution witness, is the only witness who has accused Hiss of giving secret State Department documents to a Communist spy ring. Hiss was indicted when he denied this.

Goes Over Diagnosis

Murphy went over every detail of Dr. Binger's diagnosis, asking him to state exactly what significance he attached to each sign or symptom. Binger repeated over and over again that no isolated episode had any significance. "It is the totality of the picture I pay attention to," he said.

Murphy also went over the 65-minute hypothetical question which Cross had read to Binger last Thursday and which was part of the basis for the psychiatrist's opinions. The question summarized parts of the testimony in the trial, and asked Binger to assume the testimony concerned was true.

Murphy sought to show that the fact that Chambers was for many years a Communist was some justification for his false testimony under oath, and that his record of eight years of loyal work for the Communist Party at very low pay was evidence of a "stable attachment," to offset the "unstable attachments" Dr. Binger had referred to.

No Less Significant

Binger said lies told by a Communist might have a different significance from those told by a non-Communist, but they would not be less significant. Murphy pointed out that according to Communist dogma, lying, stealing, and perhaps murder would be all right. Binger answered:

"I think any Christian American who accepts all these dogmas reveals something about himself that is important, but don't ask me to say if I think all Communists are psychopaths."

"That was to be my next question," Murphy said.

"I thought it was. The answer is no," Binger answered. "If you believe that it is all right to lie, steal and murder I would certainly pay strict attention to that fact in my estimate of you."

Among other concessions during the day Dr. Binger said that if the public library books in Chambers' locker were there "merely in violation of regulations" that might not necessarily be a case of stealing; that some college boys steal books from college libraries, but the libraries would soon be empty if all college boys took 56 books each; that the atheistic "Play for Puppets" was not published "just before Christmas" because it appeared October 22; that if Chambers took Ida Dales to his mother's home at his mother's own request that would not show "insensitivity to his mother's feelings."

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Harold P. Shapiro, the Justice Department lawyer with whom Judith Coplon admittedly spent more than one night, may be called as a witness in the spy conspiracy trial of Miss Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev.

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan mentioned this possibility at a pre-trial hearing today and said Shapiro's testimony might be admissible on a limited scale.

Ryan said also that he hopes to hear final arguments in the hearing next Monday and that the trial —if he rules that there must be a trial—will begin immediately afterward.

Says Defense May Call

John M. Kelley, jr., special assistant to the Attorney General, said he would not bind himself to call Shapiro, but added: "Maybe the defense will call him."

Shapiro's name figured last summer in the Washington trial, which resulted in Miss Coplon's conviction on charges of stealing secret Government papers for the Russians.

The defendant, a former Justice Department employe, admitted at a stormy session that she had stayed overnight with Shapiro at hotels, but denied that improper relations occurred. Shapiro himself did not take the stand.

In the pre-trial hearing now going on, she and the Russian engineer Gubitchev are trying to win dismissal of charges that they conspire to steal Government secrets.

Rules on Wire Tap

Judge Ryan has ruled that the Government must show its case against them does not rest solely on wire-tapping.

Gubitchev's lawyer, Abraham L. Pomerantz today offered to prove that the FBI's wire-tapping activities are so extensive that the telephone conversations of United Nations employes and members of foreign embassies are overheard. Ryan ruled out this line of argument.

Pomerantz also was unsuccessful in getting an FBI witness, Kenneth T. Delavigne, to say what the letter "T" means when used by the FBI in the expression "confidential informant T-4."

The lawyer said the question was designed to show that "the confidential informant' in the case was a wire tap."

Carrier Leyte To Be Modernized At Norfolk Yard

The Navy announced yesterday the carrier, Leyte, will be modernized at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va.

Representative Hardy (D., Va.) said he was advised by the Navy the work on the Essex class carrier is expected to begin in June or the latter part of the summer.

The job is expected to cost about $38,265,000, Hardy said.

The Navy told Hardy that the Leyte project is not expected to boost the present employment level of about 9200 workers at the yard.

There was no immediate information available on the length of time the job will require.

Racketeer Action By U. S. Demanded

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The mayor of Los Angeles yesterday called for a Federal anti-racketeering" law and other action by Congress to handle the problem of the tygoon, a problem the mayor called "too serious for individual cities to cope with."

Mayor Fletcher Bowron made the demand in a telegram to The Washington Post in response to a request for comment on next month's crime conference called by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. Last fall Bowron accused Frank Costello, New York gambler, of trying to boss organized gambling in Los Angeles.

This is the text of Bowron's telegram:

"As mayor of one of the largest American cities threatened with attempted invasion of big time commercialized gamblers, racketeers and hoodlums identified with organized crime, I am very hopeful that much good will result from the conference called by Attorney General McGrath.

"For a long time I have advocated a Federal approach to this problem, which is too serious for individual cities to cope with. Operations of gambling syndicates, including slot machines and allied rackets, are national in scope.

"The heads of such organizations may reside in one city and have optrations in other cities in different States. It is increasingly difficult for police and local law enforcement agencies to secure evidence against other than small fry.

Interstate Operations

"I advocate the enactment by Congress of laws making interstate operations of this character a Federal offense. I feel that we should have a Federal antiracketeering law. I further suggest that the transportation of money or credits across State lines for financing local political campaigns for the purpose of establishing illicit operations be made a Federal offense.

"The city of Los Angeles will be represented at the conference by and through the American Municipal Association."

The American Municipal Association is one of four groups invited by McGrath to the February 16 conference, a part of the annual gathering here of United States attorneys from all over the Nation.

Denver's Mayor Quigg Newton, president of the American Municipal Association, is expected soon to name the group's five delegates. He said in a telegram to The Washington Post:

"I do not yet know the exact scope of the conference, but our association will do everything possible to cooperate with the Federal Government, and I look forward to playing a full role in the conference deliberations."

One conference delegate was in Washington yesterday to argue a Supreme Court case. She is Anne X. Alpern, city solicitor of Pittsburgh, who will be among the five representatives of the National Institute of Municipal law officers appearing.

Miss Alpern told The Washington post she has "plenty" of ideas about gambling and what to do about it but does not want to discuss them prior to the conference.

Meanwhile, in New York the Associated Press reported scores of church leaders were up in arms at Mayor William O'Dwyer's proposal to legalize gambling on sports events in New York State.

Gambling in New York

A group of one hundred Brooklyn protestant clergymen adopted a resolution lamenting the "lack of moral integrity" in the proposal, and expressing "complete and unrelenting opposition." Similar opposition came from a Lutheran pastoral conference in Manhattan and the Bronx.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Searle, executive secretary of the New York Protestant Council's Human Relations Commission, said it was "naive" of O'Dwyer to assume legalized gambling would drive out the "criminal elements."

The AP reported that chances of the proposal's adoption by the legislature at Albany appear slim. Leaders of the Republican legislative majority have denounced the idea. Governor Dewey has been mum so far but it was recalled he vetoed a 1943 bill to legalize bingo.

Singer Marries Young Heiress

Arlington Bans Illegal Use of Coin Machines

Pinball machines are legal in Arlington County, but if installed and used for gambling "they will be seized and destroyed," Denman T. Rucker, Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney, stated yesterday.

Rucker's comment came after the Hirsh Coin Machine Corp., of 1309 New Jersey ave. nw., circularized Arlington merchants, saying:

"A ruling from your Commonwealth's Attorney of Arlington County will permit you to have a pinball machine installed now, if you operate the machine and do not violate any of the laws of Arlington County."

Rucker said he explained his position to a Hirsch firm official who phoned, but that the letters were sent without his authorization.

He admitted the machines are "not inherently gambling paraphernalia," but added that they are often used for gambling. Therefore, he said he urged "merchants not to run the risk that their installation would entail."

Rucker said he doubted there were "more than one or two" pinball machines in the county now.

"I regret exceedingly if an impression has been created that I am encouraging the installation of pinball machines and similar devices in Arlington County. I am opposed to their use for the good of the community."

U. S. Cleared of Telephone Tap Charges in Gaming Case

special gambling grand jury, largely as a result of testimony by Bernice Franklin, Acalotti's former girl friend, and the Government's key gambling witness.

Acalotti was convicted in December and sentenced by Judge Holtzoff to serve from eight months to two years in a Federal penitentiary for obstructing justice by threatening Miss Franklin while she was a Government witness. Lewis and 13 others were tried last November for conspiracy and lottery law violations. The trial ended in a hung jury and is scheduled for retrial February 2.

Hearing Asked by Attorney

Charges of wire-tapping were leveled by Myron G. Ehrlich, attorney for Billeci. He asked for a preliminary hearing to discover what, if any evidence, was obtained in violation of the Federal Communications Act.

In reviewing the two-day preliminary hearing Judge Holtzoff said yesterday "Evidence adduced here shows that there has been no wire tapping."

"On three occasions," he said knew of the recordings and had the evidence showed, "conversations between a Government witness (Miss Franklin) and three others were recorded, in one instance by a mechanical device and in the other two instances by a stenographer.

"It is important to observe that in each instance one of the parties either requested them or acquiesced.

"In my opinion the statute is violated if a third person, unbeknownst to the two persons telephoning listens to the conversation and divulges information thus heard; or if a third person causes a mechanical recording to be made without the knowledge of either party."

No Tie-in With Evidence

Judge Holtzoff said also that 'I further find as a fact that it was not established by the defense at this hearing that any of the three conversations contained any information that led to the obtaining of evidence by the Government."

Defense attorneys Charles E. Ford, William H. Collins, Bernard Margolius, and Ehrlich, also contended that Lewis' wires were tapped on March 25, when marshals raided the Bladensburg bungalow and answered "hundreds of incoming calls." Marshals took names and telephone numbers from the callers, the defense attorneys said, and produced the callers as witnesses against Lewis in the November trial.

Judge Holtzoff disagreed.

Before the jurist would rule on the subject, however, he asked Collins, attorney for Lewis, to stipulate that the two telephones in the Bladensburg bungalow were "owned and controlled" by Lewis.

"Unless they were his telephones," Judge Holtzoff said "no rights of his could have been violated."

Admits Ownership

In the earlier trial of Lewis, witnesses testified that the telephones were not listed to Lewis and that the telephone bills were not paid by him.

Collins first objected to such an admission but finally stipulated that Lewis owned and controlled the telephones.

Judge Holtzoff then ruled that the marshals had not violated the Communications Act in any event.

Illegal "interception is limited to the taking of information before the arrival of the call at its destined place," Judge Holtzoff said.

"To substitute oneself for the receiver of a telephone call is not an interception," he ruled.

Condemns Wire-Tapping

Before making his ruling, the judge condemned wire-tapping as a method of gathering evidence.

If he had learned that Government agents had actually tapped wires, Judge Holtzoff said "This court would have frowned on it for reasons in addition to its illegality."

"Wire-tapping could not have been justified in a case such as this one here," he said. "It is only ethical in cases involving the national security or where a human life is involved, such as kidnaping."

The jurors selected to try the three defendants are Theodore August, 54, Navy Yard buffer, 1519 25th st. se.; Richard W. DeWitt, 47, commercial artist, 4634 New Hampshire ave. nw.; Eva C. Francis, 40, Bureau of Prining and Engraving receiver, 4435 E st. se.; Luraner D. Ivey, 43, Government charwoman, 49 47th st. se.; Edelbert M. Wife Reminds Man Trial Date Is His Birthday

Thomas W. Daniels, 30, Germantown, Md., faced Municipal Judge Armond Scott yesterday charged with assaulting and threatening his estranged wife, Sue, 23.

Scott set February 14 as date of jury trial on the charges and held Daniels in a total of $800 bond.

As the latter was led away, his wife called: "Happy birthday, Tommy."

Gambled Half of Pay 5 Years, Former U. S. Worker Testifies bling racket and now also on trial in District Court for alleged numbers lottery activity.

James LaFontaine, the late picturesque operator of "Jimmie's Place" just over the District line off Bladensburg rd.

Theodore J. (Little Joe) Scheve, former operator of a high-stakes dice house here and now free on bail pending appeal from a 1 to 3-year sentence on a charge of setting up a gaming table. Scheve was Pierce's accuser in the swindle case.

Theodore A. (Mike) Meyers of Silver Hill, Md., who in 1948 received a year's jail term for operating Rockway Towers, a castle-like roadhouse and gambling house near Laurel, Md.

Pierce, in relating how he gambled for five years, said:

"If I made $54 a week, I gambled away $27 of it. There was no way of telling what it totaled."

Scheve said that Pierce mulcted him out of the $3000 by promising to deliver to him in an "influence" deal 1500 fountain pen sets to be purchased from Government surplus property stocks. Scheve said Pierce did not deliver.

Pierce recounted that the $3000 represented $2800 gambling debt he owed Scheve and the other $200 was a loan.

"What amounts and with whom else did you gamble?" asked Prosecutor Arthur J. McLaughlin.

Pierce replied:

"There is the gentleman, Mr. Lewis, across the hall and I may have gambled with other gamblers. I don't know them by name but I know where to find them."

"Say that again please," pressed McLaughlin. "With whom did you say you gambled?"

"Mr. Lewis."

"Snags Lewis?" asked the prosecutor.

"Not with him but runners," replied Pierce.

When asked to name the others, Pierce stated:

"I have gambled with LaFontaine, Mike Myers and different people that have been associated with them. But in the past two or three years, I haven't had the income to gamble."

Pierce said he placed many bets on the outcome of baseball games. At one time, he said, he gave Scheve $800 on a game for a friend and Scheve refused to pay all the winnings due.

Scheve later denied Pierce's story. He told a reporter:

"It stands to reason that if someone owes you $2800 you aren't going to lend him $200 more."

Pierce was anxious after his trial to correct any "wrong impressions" reporters might have obtained from his testimony as to Snags Lewis. A reporter had just observed Pierce chatting with Lewis during a recess.

"I wouldn't want to say that I bet with Lewis because it's not fair to Lewis," he said. "I know him but I don't know anything about him except what I read in the papers. I have seen people with him. I made bets with them."

William H. (Doc) Collins, attorney for Lewis, denied on behalf of Lewis that he ever took bets from Pierce.

Reorganize Labor Dept., C. of C. Urges

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, proposed yesterday that the Department of Labor be renamed and reorganized to promote peace between "the worker and the boss."

He told a news conference in the Carlton Hotel that it ought to be called the Department of Labor and Management. Expressing a personal viewpoint, he said the department ought to be reorganized to meet the requirements of the times, and added:

"When the Labor Department was established in 1913—to promote the welfare of wage earners, improve their working conditions and advance their employment opportunities labor needed the assistance of the Government to correct injustices and encourage fair bargaining between labor and management. This has been accomplished.

"But now the need is changed. The present Department of Labor should become a Department of Labor and Management or a Department of Labor and Industry. Its functions would be to:

"I. Help to bring about labor-management peace and promote better understanding of the mutual rights and responsibilities of both labor and management.

"2. Safeguard the interests of the public—the consumer—when they are affected by labor-management disputes."

Steinkraus said there ought to be somebody in the President's Cabinet whose job it was to bring about peace between labor and management.

"I have discussed this idea with a number of public officials who believe it has merit," he said. "I'm not suggesting that the proposed Department of Labor and Management reduce its service to labor, but I'm asking that more consideration be given the interest of the citizen—the ultimate consumer."

Asked if he would scrap the Department of Commerce, Steinkraus said he would not. He pointed out that this department had the same function in the Cabinet as a sales department does in an industry, but added it takes no part in labor-management disputes.

"Unless you have machinery to improve relations between worker and boss," he said, "you're going to have friction."

Steinkraus, in discussing President Truman's State of the Union message, said its optimism would appeal to the American people. Businessmen, he said, would be encouraged by what Mr. Truman said in his economic report about the importance of encouraging investment and developing new lines of enterprise.

But the President's proposals for expanding Government activities, Steinkraus said, were "disturbing." In travelling about the country, he said, he was asked more questions about extravagance in Government than about any other problem.

"In the fiscal field," he went on to say, "we should get our heads out of the clouds. We must not only do more constructive thinking about economy in Government; we must require its enforcement. Continuous deficit spending is unwise, unsound, and destructive to our economy. Any business, conducted on such a principal would soon find itself in bankruptcy."

Steinkraus denied the Treasury deficit is due primarily to the cost of the armed services or to the help being given other nations.

"The expected deficit this year," he said, "is due in great part to the increase in recent years of Federal spending for projects closely connected with development of the welfare-state idea. This type of spending contemplates the disbursement within the regular budget in the next year of about seven billion dollars."

Steinkraus remarked on Mr. Truman's forecast of a $300,000,000,000 national output in 1954 and a trillion-dollar economy by the year 2000.

"Instead of having these glowing figures for five years and 50 years ahead," he said, "we should deal with the problem of today. The key word to our Congress should be: economy."

The Chamber of Commerce leader urged that the Taft-Hartley law be given a fair chance to operate. He pointed out that union membership had continued to grow under the law, and that strikes last year were 25 per cent below 1946, the last year before the law was enacted.

He said the Chamber is in favor of broader social security coverage, and expressed the Senate will pass a House-enacted bill to bring this about.

Gov. Tuck to Seek More School Funds

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—Governor Tuck disclosed to the General Assembly today he would ask for increased funds for public education but said Virginians must be taught to be lifters and not leaners.

"What Virginia needs more than anything else is for every one of her school teachers and patrons to put the child before the dollar," said the frock-coated governor in his "State of the Commonwealth" address to the opening joint meeting of the 1950 session.

Tuck coupled the word on more school aid with a reassertion of his views on public education. And he found this a good springboard from which to jump on a particular dislike—Federal grants in aid.

He drew applause repeatedly for phrases that punched at "the bureaucratic colossus on the shores of the Potomac."

And he tied his distaste of Federal grants into the education theme.

"Neither the Government nor the General Assembly can appropriate education," Tuck said. "Federal dollars are equally powerless under the iniquitous grants-in-aid program so sought after by groups whose interest in dollars appear to exceed their interest in education.

"Federal grants-in-aid to education would only serve to break down the tottering financial stability of our national Government and to bring conditions intolerable for the people of Virginia.

"There is no such thing as Federal aid without Federal controls and dictation, as evidenced by the recent executive order on public housing. . . .

"Frequently we hear the prediction that unless the State improves this or that service according to the Federal pattern, the Federal Government will step in and do it.

"This is sorcery in one of its most evil forms."

On public education Tuck said he thought it should teach youth how to engage in some useful pursuit whereby they could contribute to the upbuilding of society of the State. He saw it this way, he said, rather than teaching youth "the shapes of letters and the tricks of numbers, leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery and their literature to lust."

Particulars of how much he will ask for schools will be contained in his message next Monday on the budget. Then it will be seen whether he will ask for enough to meet platform commitments of John S. Battle who succeeds him in office on January 18.

The Governor gave an account of his administration's stewardship for the past four years and expressed pride that the State had stood off the lure of a something-for-nothing philosophy.

stitution for Virginia to enter a compact with other southern states to provide regional education facilities on the college level, particularly for Negroes.

Annual School Promotions, 17 Buses Asked in Arlington

Arlington parents, attending a school board hearing at the Thomas Jefferson School last night, voted 250 to 40 in favor of annual promotions of students instead of the present semester system.

Only one vote was cast against an otherwise unanimous verdict by the group in favor of purchasing 17 school buses at an initial cost of $85,000. School bus transportation now is conducted on a franchise basis with the Arnold and A.B. & W. bus companies.

Preceding public hearing on these two questions, the school board unanimously elected Mrs. Elizabeth P. Campbell chairman for 1950, and Colin C. MacPherson, vice chairman.

Groups favoring the annual promotion system included the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, he Peyton-Randolph P-T-A, the Shirley P-T-A, the Arlington Forest Citizens Association, the Fairlington Civic Association, Mathew Maury P-TA, the Langston P-T-A and the Arlington Association of University Women.

Among those who expressed opposition to the annual system was Commander J. W. Leverton, of 800 S. Adams st., Arlington, who said he felt the semester system was more flexible since "all children don't have the same learning capacity."

On the subject of school buses, School Superintendent William A. Early told the group that if the buses are bought, some should be purchased immediately for February use. Cost of the buses was put at five cents a year on each $100 of assesed valuation.

Betts Named Head Of Engineer Group

Clifford A. Betts of the United States Forest Service, has been elected president of the District of Columbia Council of Engineering and Architectural Societies for 1950, it was announced yesterday.

82 in Fairfax to Study Bills

Richmond, Va. Jan. 11.—Delegate Edwin Lynch today announced the names of 82 residents of Fairfax County who have volunteered to be members of "committees on legislative matters."

Lynch said the committees, broken down to correspond to the various committees in the Virginia General Assembly, will be sent copies of every bill introduced at the current session of the Legislature.

They will also be given a "mid-session report" and an "end-of-session report" on progress made by the General Assembly, Lynch said.

Committee chairmen announced by the Fairfax delegate included Robert Lenhart, Vienna, appropriations; Guy Bayes, Chesterbrook, finance; Mrs. R. A. Osborn, Chesterbrook, schools; Hubert Gerkin, Vienna, roads; Homer Stutsman, Herndon, agriculture; C. B. Runyon, Falls Church, counties, cities and towns; Mark O'Sullivan, Vienna, labor; Paul Reiber, McLean, general law; Mrs. Anne Wilkins, Baileys Roads, welfare; Jack Corboy, Vienna, privileges and elections; Walter C. Crain, insurance and banking; R. A. Osborn, game and inland fisheries, and John Turnbull, Falls Church, courts of justice.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Rule Change Splits Group In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11.—The Virginia General Assembly began its 1950 session today with a sharp factional split in the House of Delegates over a proposed rule change.

One of the leaders against a move to send all resolutions before the House to the five-member rules committee, regardless of their contents, was Delegate Frank P. Moncure, of Stafford County.

When Tuck finished, Delegate Charles F. Unruh, of West Moreland, introduced the first five bills in the House. He proposed a joint Maryland-Virginia Potomac River oyster commission to bring peace in the perenniel "Battle of the Bivalves."

Delegate Robert Whitehead, of Nelson, promptly offered an amendment to the section that would commit all resolutions to the rules committee.

Delegate Unruh's oyster bills, which he said may "run into trouble" in the Maryland Legislature, provide that:

1. The Governors of the two States each appoint three members to a joint commission, consisting of the chairman of the Virginia Fisheries Commission and of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission as ex-officio members, plus a resident of each State in a county bordering the Potomac, plus a member at large.
2. The commission have jurisdiction over oyser beds in the river, including enforcement and conservation, with authority to close depleted beds until restocked.
3. The use of 30-inch "hand-dredges" be legalized for gathering oysters, provided motor-driven winches are not used on oyster boats (present Virginia law permits only the use of hand tongs).
4. Persons leasing private oyster beds be required to conform to State cull laws, which prohibit the gathering of oysters under 3 inches in diamater.

Among other bills introduced today was a proposal by Whitehead that a constitutional convention be called solely for considering repeal of the poll tax. In the senate, Republicans S. F. Landreth, of Galax, and Ted Dalton, of Radford, asked for a referendum on an unrestricted constitutional convention.

A bill to repeal the state's absent voters law was introduced in senate by Harry C. Stuart of Elk Garden.

Both houses elected officers at the opening of the session.

Senator Morton Goode of Dinwiddie, was named president pro tem of the Senate to succeed Senate Robert O. Norris of Lively, who resigned to become chairman of the finance committee. The former chairman, John S. Battle of Charlottesville, will be inaugurated as Governor on January 18.

Delegate E. Blackburn Moore of Berryville, a member of the House since 1933 and floor leader two years ago, was named Speaker of the House, to succeed G. Alvin Massenburg of Hampton, who was defeated in the November election by an "anti-organization" candidate, Victor P. Wilson.

Cadillac

Will Raise the World's Standard Again!

In 1950, the reasons for moving up to Cadillac will become so great, and so manifold, that if you are contemplating the purchase of any car outside the lowest-price field—you should see the new Cadillacs first!

Cadillac's new cars will have their initial presentation at the General Motors Mid-Century Motorama—at the Waldorf, in New York—from January 19th to 27th.

As soon after that as cars are available, the new Cadillacs will be placed on display for your inspection in this community.

In the meantime, here are some of the things you may look forward to seeing when America's most renowned motor car builder unveils its offerings for the ensuing year.

You will see four wholly new series of cars—all with entirely new bodies—and all so gorgeously styled that they are destined to change every existing idea as to how beautiful a motor car can be.

You will see cars whose performance is so outstanding that to drive one of them for a single hour is to want it forever. The advancement embraces every phase of performance—power, quietness, smoothness, safety, and handling ease. To drive a 1950 Cadillac, is to have the motor car thrill of a lifetime.

You will see scores of advancements and improvements which add to quality, endurance, economy and dependability.

And, finally, you will see all this in a car whose lowest-priced model will actually cost less than certain models of numerous other makes of cars!

Yes—you should see the new Cadillacs before you act in 1950. They will not only give you the new yardstick for motor car quality—but they will give you the new yardstick for motor car value, as well.

It won't be long! So please stand by for the presentation date for this community.

9 In Revenue Bureau Held Guilty of 'Politics'

By the United Press

The Civil Service Commission yesterday found nine present and former employes in the Connecticut district of the Internal Revenue Bureau guilty of political activity in violation of the Hatch (clean politics) Act.

At the same time, the commission cleared six others of the charges, outgrowth of a plan to collect contributions for the Democratic State Central Committee in Connecticut in 1946.

Those found guilty, if still with the bureau, must forfeit their jobs and all will be barred from future employment in the bureau. Frank R. Kramer, who was district collector at the time, already has been convicted in Federal Court.

Found guilty of participating were: James T. Healy, district field director; John R. Shea, district cashier; Mrs. Anna L. Delaney, wage and excise tax division chief; Henry H. Webb, former division chief at Hartford; Robert L. Raby, former zone deputy collector, Meriden; Gabriel Price, former deputy collector at Waterbury; Thomas Skidd, former zone deputy at Norwich; Thomas L. Wall (job not specified); and Martin J. Donahue, division chief at Stanford.

Healy, according to the commission's finding, presided at a meeting at Hartford at which the word was passed to supervisory officers from various sections of the State as to what size contributions were expected.

Civil Rights Thrown Into Oleo Tax Fight

Leaders Fidget

Tax Program Expected Next Week

President Truman's "moderate increase" tax program, still a secret after three messages to Congress, probably will be made public next week, the White House indicated yesterday.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters that Mr. Truman hopes to have the special message ready by that time. He is still working on it and there is no chance it will be presented this week, Ross said.

The secrecy which the president has thrown about his forthcoming recommendations was reported to be resulting in some fidgets, among administration supporters in Congress.

According to one House member with strong White House connections Mr. Truman hasn't made a move to discuss his proposals in advance with the Congressmen who will have to carry the ball once the plan is made known.

Election Year Difficulty

It is a tough assignment to put across a tax boost in an election year and the difficulties are multiplied when the tax authorities on Capitol Hill have no advance opportunity to smooth the path.

The general belief at the Capitol is that Mr. Truman will ask for a sizable increase in corporation taxes, along with a recommendation for reduction or repeal of some excise taxes, such as those on jewelry, furs, handbags, light bulbs and transportation.

How much additional net revenue the President hopes to raise is strictly a guess. Estimates run from one billion dollars up.

It is generally expected that he will recommend chinking up existing loopholes in the tax laws and a vigorous collection and enforcement program to catch tax dodgers.

Snyder Keeps Secret

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder at a news conference gave no inkling of the specific proposals to be made. He said, however, that the Treasury favors making the interest on future State and local bond issues subject to the Federal income tax.

Under present law, such interest payments are exempt. However, a businessman's organization, the Committee for Economic Development, recommended this week that the Government raise 35 million dollars a year by taxing future bond interest.

The Treasury chief also said that whether the Government deficit (excess of spending over income) can be held to the President's $5,133,000,000 estimate or less next fiscal year is going to depend upon the action of Congress.

He referred to what Congress does in voting funds for spending as well as to what it does about boosting tax revenues.

Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) yesterday offered three civil rights amendments to the bill to remove all Federal taxes from oleomargarine, in an open effort to kill the measure.

The amendments, if adopted, would force Southern Senators, who favor free trade for margarine, to vote against their own bill. The oleo bill was introduced by Senator J. W. Fulbright (D., Ark.) Because margarine is a major outlet for cottonseed oil, it is favored by all cotton States.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said an effort to table the amendments will be made when Langer tries to bring them to a vote. The Democratic conference a week ago decided to vote to keep all subjects "not germane to the issue" out of consideration of the margarine repealer.

The three amendments offered by Langer included anti-lynching, anti-poll-tax and fair employment practices. All are on President Truman's list of wanted legislation. Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) previously offered an amendment to repeal other excise taxes besides those on margarine, including jewelry, furs, luggage, telephone and telegraph bills, etc.

Lucas has told the Senate that they will be given an opportunity to vote on both civil rights and excise tax repeal later.

In his three-hour attack on the margarine bill, which would repeal taxes as high as 10 cents a pound on yellow margarine, Langer asked if margarine was going to be served at the Democratic Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners.

He pointed out that Charles Luckman, president of Lever Brothers, is "general manager of the dinners." Lever Brothers owns the largest margarine company in America, the John Jelke Co. of Chicago.

He also read a list of companies of which Luckman is a director, including many abroad.

Sales Slowed

Maxwell Cut Leads Coffee Price Drop

A drop of 4 cents a pound in the wholesale price of one leading brand of coffee yesterday will bring cuts in some other brands, and be matched by retail price reductions shortly, local distributors said last night.

Yesterday's drop was announced in New York by General Foods Corp., distributors of Maxwell House coffee, and applies to their "grocery pack" rather than to coffee sold to restaurants, trade sources here said. The new wholesale price is 76 cents a pound.

At least one roaster here, the H. Wilkins Co., will drop its price today, from 78 cents to 76 cents, a spokesman said.

General Foods said the cut "in no way reflects any change in the green coffee market—it's strictly a competitive adjustment to meet prices of other major roasters who failed to advance their quotations to well—justified levels earlier."

Other trade sources, both here and in New York, however, said sales of vacuum packed coffee have been slow recently. They said people are still drinking up coffee they bought and hoarded last November when prices soared.

Milk Drops One Cent In Baltimore Area

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—The price of milk will drop a penny a quart in the Baltimore area on February 13.

That announcement was made today after a conference between the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers Association and officials of Baltimore dairies.

This will mean that the cost of a quart of home-delivered milk will be 20 cents, instead of the present 21 cents. The price paid farmers was reduced from $6 per hundredweight to $5.56. The drop was attributed to a decline in the cost of feed grains and the fact that the supply of milk recently has exceeded the demand.

Shade Use In Temperature Control Urged

Using venetian blinds over a glass roof as a temperature-control aid was suggested here yesterday at a meeting of the Building Research Advisory Board.

More than 270 persons, mostly architects and construction men, were here from all parts of the country to attend the meetings, which will continue today in the National Academy of Sciences building. The BRAB is part of the National Research Council.

The venetian-blinds-on-the-roof idea came from Sigmund Fritz, U. S. Weather Bureau meterologist.

By painting the surface white, he said, the blinds would reflect and keep out heat in the summer and could be opened up at night to let cool air in.

The same glass roof, it was suggested, could be effective in winter-time in a system of solar-heating a house.

Other participants in the discussion on "How Can the Weather Sciences Be Developed for Better Use in the Building Industry" included Francis W. Reichelderefer, chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau, and H. C. S. Thom, bureau climatological specialist.

Reichelderfer urged the building industry to take advantage of the special climate information available through the U. S. Weather Bureau.

For Rental Homes

New Housing Bill Offered By Maybank

Additional legislation designed to spur the construction of rental homes for middle-income families was introduced yesterday by Senator Maybank (D., S. C.).

The bill supplements an Administration measure that Maybank offered last week.

The Administration proposal is to set up a program for the purchase of moderately priced housing by cooperatives. Maybank's is aimed at liberalizing financing for rental projects.

Both measures are designed to carry out the middle-income housing program for which President Truman asked in his State-of-the-Union message.

Public hearings are scheduled to begin today. Raymond M. Foley, director of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, will be the first witness before the Senate Banking Committee.

Maybank, chairman of the banking unit, said the bill he introduced yesterday would provide more liberal Government mortgage insurance terms under the Federal Housing Administration program.

Taft Will Lose, Boyle Is Told

William M. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said at the White House yesterday that Ohio Democrats believe they can defeat Senator Robert A. Taft for reelection next autumn.

Boyle had just reported to President Truman about his visit to Columbus, where he talked to the Democratic leaders of Ohio, and to representatives of labor and farm organizations.

He said Mr. Truman was encouraged to hear his report and to know that the people of Ohio were behind his program.

Asked by a reporter if he thought that Taft could be whipped, Boyle said that Ohio Democrats believed that a Democrat would be elected to Taft's seat. He said they also expected to pick up two or three additional House seats.

Boyle declined to predict whom the Ohio Democrats will nominate as Taft's opponent. The deadline for filing for the Democratic primary election is February 2.

He said that the enthusiasm among Ohio Democrats now is even greater than it was in November, 1948, when Mr. Truman carried the State by a narrow margin.

Wheeler continued as acting committee counsel, succeeding James R. Kirkland, who was appointed a judge of District Court. Other staff members continued on the job.

Makeup of Organization

Of the seven-member staff, three persons, including Mollohan and Wheeler, have received their jobs since the Democrats recaptured

Dworshak Darby

Senate control with the Eighty-first Congress; the other four were appointed during the Republican Eightieth Congress.

Committee members have indicated they expect a shift in the line-up to bring the committee patronage more in accord with present committee membership.

Mollohan is expected to give up the District Committee assignment by his own choice for an appointment as United States marshal for the northern district of West Virginia. There is no indication, however, that Wheeler will be restored to the top job. In fact there have been strong indications he may be dropped from the staff.

The District Committee payroll now is about $55,000, with the three top jobs over $10,000, and another job over $8000.

Senators Dworshak and Darby will take the District Committee assignments formerly filled by Senators Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.). The latter was defeated for re-election last fall, while Mundt is moving from the District to the Rules Committee.

In other committee shifts, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) is going from Banking and Currency to Armed Services; Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) is going from Rules to Banking and Currency, and Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.) is moving from Finance to Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Senator Dworshak in the eightieth Congress was one of the "big four" of District legislation, serving as chairman of the Senate District Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the city budget.

He took the lead in initiating the exhaustive survey of District school needs, conducted by Dr. George D. Strayer, and presented to Congress last year.

Construction of a new hall, to be added to the present building of the Rosensteel Council, Knights of Columbus, in Forest Glen, Md., was authorized by Council members at a meeting Tuesday night.

The new hall, estimated to cost $66,000, will be a one-story building equipped for entertainments, sports events, dances and meetings and will be available for rental by other groups in the community, Grand Knight John Hannan announced.

The present building, located on Rosensteel dr., Forest Glen, will be used as an entrance to the new hall. Donald S. Johnson, Washington architect, has been retained for the job.

80 Cents for 6 Expected to Cut Token Buying

Capital Transit proposed purchase of six tokens at a time for 80 cents instead of 3 for 40 cents to discourage token riding in favor of the higher cash fare.

Vice President E. C. Giddings said, "If tokens are sold at six for 80 cents, more people will pay the cash fare than at three for 40 cents—and we need the additional revenue."

He said this would be particularly true of the "chance" or "not-so-often" riders, while regulars, such as former pass purchasers, "will invest in the six for 80," Giddings said.

Giddings cited the situation in 1947 as proof that sale of tokens in large numbers forces more to pay cash. At that time the sale of tokens was changed from six for 50 cents to three for 25 cents.

"More people began to buy tokens than those paying cash. This resulted in a loss of $30,000 a year in revenue," Giddings reported.

The company official acknowledged that CTC might gain some additional revenue through increased loss of tokens by customers, but pointed out that the same customers might lose ordinary coins. In reply to a question, he also conceded that the six-token system had the effect of lending the transit company a greater amount of interest-free working capital.

On the other side, it was pointed out that it takes less time to sell a rider six tokens at a time, than it does to sell him two batches of three tokens.

Capital Transit Asks 15c Fare 80c for 6 Tokens, No Passes

increase granted October 1, 1948, was to have yielded 5¾ percent rate return, but actually has brought in about 3 percent. This is before the wage increase is taken into account, too, the firm noted.

The fair rate of return set by PUC several years ago was 7½ percent. The company, in its petition, pointed out that the proposed rate boost would "fail to give the company the necessary minimum return," thus leaving open the door for a request for another rate boost.

The weekly pass has been in use since 1933 when the Capital Transit Co. was organized. Fares then were 10 cents cash, 4 tokens for 30 cents, $1 for weekly streetcar and feeder bus line passes and $1.25 for a "universal" pass good on all lines.

Since then, the following rate changes have been authorized:

January, 1937, 10 cents, 4 for 30, $1.25 pass; November, 1937, 10 cents, 6 for 50, $1.25; January, 1943, 10 cents, 3 for 25, $1.25; May, 1947, 10 cents, $1.50 pass (no tokens; October 31, 1948, 13 cents cash, 3 for 35, $1.75.

A three-cent school fare, established by Act of Congress, remains unchanged. A further congressional act would be required to boost this fare.

In Baltimore last week the Baltimore Transit Co. asked for a 15-cent cash rate, to replace a current schedule of 13 cents cash, tokens at 2 for 25 cents and sale of off-peak tickets at one fare plus 5 cents good for a round trip between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Yesterday's rate raise request by CTC was the second filed by the firm in the past two weeks. On December 29, the firm applied to the Maryland Public Service Commission for an increase from the present 5 cents per zone on its Maryland lines to 7 cents.

Increased rates, in the past, have accelerated the already steady decline in the number of riders here. When fares were raised in May, 1947, patronage declined 5 per cent and after the fare hike in October, 1948, it dropped 3½ per cent.

In addition, company officials have computed postwar "normal" decline —r esulting mainly from greater availability of autos—at 6 per cent, but starting last June this spurted to 7½ per cent. In the 11 months ending November 30, the number of revenue passengers was 282,327,815, compared with 315,279,458 in the same period of 1948.

Approximately a million persons are carried daily.

The company has been making operating economies ever since it became evident its union employes would receive a wage increase, officials said. This month 140 men will be laid off and an additional 40 retired shortly on pensions, running the total dismissal list since last July up to 501.

At the same time, traffic counters are maintaining close checks on passenger volume, cutting back on off-peak hours where volume has dropped substantially, the firm announced. Rush-hour service has not been changed, officials assured.

Problem Child Talk Set

Dr. Fritz Redl, of Wayne University, Detroit, will speak at 2:30 p. m., Saturday, at the dormitory of the National Catholic School of Social Service at 2400 19th st. nw. His topic will be "What Should We Do About Problem Children?"

FTC to Air 'Packing' in Auto Financing

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday it would begin hearings February 2 on rules designed to prevent "packing" automobile installment sales contracts with hidden charges.

The proposed rules provide:

1. That the buyer be furnished an itemized list of costs involved unless these costs are clearly shown in the sales contract or chattel mortgage. Failure to disclose all items of cost in writing would be declared an unfair trade practice.

2. That the buyer must be furnished an "exact and complete" copy of the installment sales contract.

3. That the practice of having the purchaser sign a blank sales contract would be held unfair if the contract was to be filled in later by the seller to deceive the buyer. An exception would be made in the case of serial numbers and other data that could be obtained only at time of delivery.

4. That use of false or deceptive representations regarding insurance rates or costs or methods of financing would be deemed an unfair trade practice.

5. That use of multiple rate charts for the same motor vehicle to conceal "kickbacks" to the seller by means of additional finance charges would be held an unfair trade practice.

Hearings will be conducted under supervision of Lowell B. Mason, acting chairman of the FTC.

Controls Block Investment, Realtors Told

Rent control was blamed yesterday by Representative Ralph W. Gwinn (R., N. Y.) for virtually stopping private investment in rental housing without Government insurance to guarantee the mortgage.

He spoke at a luncheon of real estate board presidents of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the Statler Hotel. The realtors are in town to attend their annual conference on 1950 activities.

Representative Gwinn declared that cities need more tax funds to pay increased operating costs of municipalities, but could not get more revenue without raising property taxes.

"It is obvious that any city administration that increases assessed valuations on rent-controlled property beyond rental values is simply liquidating its own citizens," he daded.

He called for a "Boston Tea Party" to throw off the "crushing burden of Federal Government, for a redefining of the constitutional functions of government and limitations on government powers."

The meetings, which started last Sunday, will end tonight. Nathaniel E. Keith, director, slum clearance section of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, will speak this morning on how local communities can participate in the Government's program to remove slums.

Naylor Gardens Rents Argued

A hearing on a request for an 11 percent rent increase for 448 apartments at Naylor Gardens opened yesterday in the District Building board room.

The apartment owners testified before Rent Control Examiner William F. Mansfield, that their operating costs have increased and that "peculiar circumstances" determined the original rents.

The Government built the 778-unit development at 30th st. and Naylor rd., se. in 1943 for war workers and sold it early in 1948 to the Veterans Cooperative Housing Association.

Witnesses testified that rents were originally set by the Government at rates war workers could afford, without regard to profit. The cooperative is expected to argue today that these rates were lower than would have been set by private business.

The cooperative claims a substantial increase in operating costs since the summer of 1948 when it was granted an 8 percent increase. However, an audit made by a firm retained by protesting tenants showed a decrease of about $15,000 in that period.

Several tenants testified yesterday that services performed by the management were fewer and harder to get than before the project was sold. It was also stated that apartment owners (300 members of the cooperative) get preferential treatment.

The hearing will continue today at 9:30 a. m. at 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw.

$100,000 Fund Voted For Investigating Unit

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday authorized a $100,000 appropriation for the Senate Investigating Subcommittee to operate through February 1, 1951.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), is the investigating arm of the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures.

Its investigation into five percenter activities resulted recently in the indictment of John Maragon, Greek-born friend of Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, on perjury charges.

99.6 Percent Loyalty

Figures from the FBI continue to attest to the loyalty of virtually all Federal employes. Latest statistics show that of the more than 2,700,000 Government workers investigated, 99.6 percent have been cleared. In 10,359 cases which the Loyalty Review Board turned over to the FBI for full field investigation, discharges were recommended in only 139 instances, though undoubtedly some other persons resigned voluntarily. These figures are eloquent contradiction of the "Communists in Government" charges that emanate from irresponsible sources. Not only that, but they speak well for the general moderation which, with a few flagrant exceptions, has characterized the conduct of the loyalty program.

All of this is reason why, if the screening of new employes is continued, as Chairman Richardson of the Loyalty Review Board recommends, it now should be possible to provide the safeguards the program lacks. The conspiratorial designs of the Communists give justification for some sort of checks in sensitive jobs. But this check has merit only as it is restricted to jobs of real importance to security and as it gives the greatest possible protection against rumormongering, malice and circumstantial evidence.

Particularly is this definition necessary if the discretionary powers of heads of sensitive agencies to fire "irresponsible" employes are to be increased as the Administration proposes. No one has a vested right to a Government job, least of all in a sensitive agency. But there is a world of difference between "irresponsibility" and disloyalty. Unless precise standards of procedure are drawn up, there is grave danger that "security risks" will be stigmatized as disloyal.

Such standards ought, in our opinion, to provide for the transfer of "security risks" to nonsensitive jobs wherever possible. If discharge of irresponsible employes is necessary, it should be on grounds of inefficiency or incompetence so that there is no possible stigma of disloyalty. Beyond this, it ought to be basic for all necessary loyalty investigations to include a full statement of the evidence, including a chance for the defendant to challenge his accusers. If the evidence is not of the sort that will stand up in court, then it is highly questionable whether it ought to be the basis for branding anyone as disloyal.

Policy In Asia

How convincing Secretary Acheson was to the Senators in defending the hands-off policy on Formosa cannot, of course, be gauged from Senator Connally's account. But a schoolboy, let alone a person of the eminence of Mr. Acheson, could have put up an intelligent case against American adventurism in Formosa. The notion that this country should base its policy in Asia first upon consolidating Chiang Kai-shek's grip on an island where the natives, let alone the Asiatics generally, regard him as an intruder and then upon an alliance with him is merely the product of fevered imaginations. Complete disentanglement is the need, not more involvement.

Yet, having said this, we have every sympathy with those who want to know when and where a policy on Asia is going to emerge. The policy must, we insist, be essentially diplomatic—meaning economic and political and psychological action. In a seething continent the question is, Where? It is of no earthly use to conduct holding operations or fight rearguard battles where existing authority is collapsing or bound to collapse. Nothing is more fatal in military let alone diplomatic operations. Many hindsight strategists, for instance, regret that in the war of the Pacific a retirement was not made immediately to Australia, so as to have a real springboard for mounting an offensive.

What is the diplomatic springboard in turbulent Asia? Not Hongkong, Indo-China, Siam, or Burma, we should imagine; but Indonesia and India. Statesmanship, profiting from Formosa, must be concerned with these two countries before and not after they become problem children. The whole preoccupation with interventionism in Formosa at this lost date reminds us of Abe Lincoln's story of the badger and the barrel. A village crowd of dog-owners were invited to put their dogs in competition in getting the badger out of the barrel. One after the other went in, only to come out torn and bleeding. The young Abe came last with his dog, put it in rear first, and the badger did come out—hanging on to the tail of the embarrassed dog. Head first or hind first the operation was bad for the dog; similarly an operation in Formosa would not wind up the American problem, but would be the beginning of it.

Defense Dollars

Few persons in or out of the military establishment are competent to state whether the $13,545,000,000 defense budget for 1951 is actually adequate for security. The budget is patently a compromise between the wishes of military men and the ability of the economy to sustain defense expenditures. Assuredly the 13½-billion figure is a considerable reduction from the estimate of more than 20 billions asked by the separate services on purely military considerations. It also reflects between 1 and 1½ billions in Johnson savings which supposedly do not impair military effectiveness. The best yardstick by which to judge the budget is Secretary Johnson's assertion reflecting Adam Smith's "defense comes before opulence" that security was the first consideration and economy second, and his assurance that defense will be sufficient for the next two years.

There will, of course, be quibbling as to details. The most significant cuts come in the Navy and Marine Corps, particularly in naval aviation. We have some reservations about the size of the reduction in carrier aviation, though Admiral Sherman says he believes the distribution of funds between the services to be equitable. It is encouraging that, according to Secretary Johnson, the budget for antisubmarine warfare remains substantially as requested, and that, in view of recent neglect, is welcome.

Air Force Secretary Symington has been honest in asserting that he still believes in the necessity of a 70-group force (67 under the new grouping). Obviously his concurrence with the 48-group force provided in the budget was reluctant, though he promises that the Air Force will make no attempt to get Congress to change the figure. Congress ought to respect that promise, for the effect of another end run by air power zealots would be to destroy the careful integration of the over-all budget.

Practicality, not sentimentality for one particular service, must be the criterion. What the country has a right to expect from military expenditures is a balanced defense sufficient for an initial striking force and a minimum holding operation. It is worthy of note in this respect that despite other reductions there will be more men in fighting units during 1951. It is significant, too, that the Air Force will purchase more aircraft and that the Army will have more money for research and procurement of new weapons. This is to be accomplished within the new performance budget which will give an accurate picture of the cost of individual operations.

The defense budget, of course, cannot stand alone as an isolated fact; it must be related to the country's obligations and commitments. One such commitment is the defense of western Europe in company with the Atlantic nations; the main purpose of allies here is to enlarge the area of defense by sharing the burden. In this respect the 13½-billion-dollar figure is not strictly accurate; the cost of the military aid program legitimately must be charged against defense expenditures. Nor can the military budget be regarded as static, especially in the campaigns of the cold war. New situations, new commitments, require constant reappraisal, and the greatest need here is for the closest liaison between the State and Defense Departments. Here again is emphasized the tremendous importance of the National Security Council, whose main job is to reconcile military policy with foreign policy.

Arrow In The Air

The State Department cannot have it both ways in the matter of the blockade runners of the Isbrandtsen line. The blockade was declared by Nationalist China operating boats which the United States either gave the Chinese or disposed of as surplus property. It was promptly declared illegal by the powers, including the United States, on the grounds that the Nationalists had not the power or the means to make it effective. The Isbrandtsen line, attracted by the profits accruing from a dangerous trade, then put several of its merchantmen on the Hongkong-Shanghai run. When the Nationalists fired at them, the State Department warned the line to desist, and threatened a withdrawal of licenses in the event that the line persisted. The Isbrandtsen line, however, refused to heed the State Department, resting its defiance upon its constitutional rights, which buttress age-old maritime law, to sail the high seas, even to trade with ports where a blockade isn't regarded as legal.

The freedom of the seas is a right which is precious among the American traditions and which goes back to Hellenic times. More precise texts came from the Romans. The Emperor Antoninus summed up the legal theory in the dictum: "I am indeed lord of the world, but the law is lord of the sea." The sea in this connotation, of course, means the high seas, for the shoreline strip of sea is territorial water, which has been claimed at times up to 12 miles. The United States itself committed a breach of this maritime law in the famous Trent case, when it stopped a British vessel on the high seas and took off a couple of commissioners to England of the Confederacy; but it later apologized and released the commissioners. However, the Flying Arrow, which has again been the object of Nationalist attack, was hit at a distance of 22 miles off shore, the Chinese commander saying that he did so because the mouth of the Yangtze is sown with Nationalist mines—which is extremely unlikely—and that he was in fact saving the Flying Arrow by trying to sink it!

The dilemma is this: The Isbrandtsen line is carrying cargoes to and from Communist China. This trade is anathema to many Americans, and is therefore embarrassing to the Administration, which, in spite of the hands-off policy in Formosa, is still aiding Chiang Kai-shek with ECA funds (operation rathole if ever there was one) and military counsel and munitions under old commitments. Nobody has charged Mr. Hans J. Isbrandtsen with being a Communist or with being even a sympathizer. He is simply a shipowner who with his captains and crews is turning over an inflated, because dangerous, dollar. Yesterday he said he had no dealings with the Communist government, but was carrying cargo between American firms in China and American firms in America. He has also denied, in reply to Senator Ferguson's insinuations, that he is gun-running. What he insists upon is the protection of his boats not in territorial waters, where he will take his chances, but on the high seas.

It will be very difficult to deny the Isbrandtsen line's contention that in peacetime there is no warrant for denying protection to the American flag on the high seas—not when its boats have been hit, but before they have been hit. Of course, the Navy can act only when protection is within its power. That the China seas are not outside this power is indicated by the fact that as soon as the Flying Arrow was made unseaworthy a couple of American destroyers sped to its rescue. The whole of the fantastic story of the Flying Arrow illustrates what can happen when foreign policy lacks straightforwardness—which has long been absent in American relations with China.

Guarding Civil Rights

Attorney General McGrath has at last named George Triedman, a Rhode Island lawyer in whom he appears to repose great confidence, as chief of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Section. The appointment was long overdue, since the section has functioned for more than a year under an acting chief. Perhaps the delay was occasioned by hope that Congress would act on the President's recommendation of last year to transform the section into a division and give its chief the status of an Assistant Attorney General. The President has reiterated this request, and we hope that Congress will accede to it.

Mr. Triedman's job is an extraordinarily important one. It carries with it responsibility for Federal protection against State violation of the rights guaranteed to individuals by the Constitution and laws of the United States. In recent years, the Civil Rights Section has made effective use for this purpose of two statutes enacted shortly after the Civil War to protect the rights of freedmen from violation by conspiracy or "under color of any law." But these statutes, although held valid for limited purposes by the Supreme Court, are vague as to the rights they guarantee and inadequate in the provision of penalties. They need to be modernized and made more specific.

Attorney General McGrath, when he was in the Senate, introduced a bill to do precisely this. Its enactment is, in our judgment, the most important of all the President's civil rights recommendations. There is no question as to its constitutionality. There is no doubt as to its utility and enforceability. A vigorous civil rights division, armed with such legislation, can make equality before the law a living reality throughout the United States.

Water Resources

The still unrelieved water shortage in New York City is an example, but merely one example, of the need for more consideration of the Nation's water resources. The President has taken an important step toward fulfillment of this need in the creation of a special seven-man Water Resources Commission, headed by the distinguished engineer, Morris L. Cooke, to study Federal participation in water projects and recommend a long-term policy.

The immediate function of the commission will be to furnish the Administration with a yardstick by which to judge the many bills dealing with water which emerge from Congress. One of the most important questions, for example, is how to allocate the cost as between such programs as irrigation, power, salinity control, flood prevention and the like. Practices of Federal agencies operating in the same areas are often hodgepodges of inconsistency, and the inconsistency is magnified by the manner in which Congress considers each isolated project without a general criterion to guide it.

Beyond this immediate job, the commission has an opportunity to focus more attention on water as the most neglected and most wasted of the country's resources. What has long been a matter of life and death in the West is becoming a national problem, as the New York situation and falling water tables in the East show. One result of the commission's study should be to advance the goal of a Federal Department of Natural Resources to unify governmental policies.

SNOW LIGHT

Ask the lovers; they will know
On the night unlit by stars
There is still the light of snow.

Walking late with solitude
Through the shining winter fields
Where the silent woodlots brood,

Coming slowly arm in arm
Down the trampled country road
Homeward to the lamplit farm,

They have seen the night above
Curving low from hill to hill
And the earth as if with love

Glowing clear and firm and sure.
They have traveled unafraid.
They have seen the light endure.

South Capitol Bridge

We note that the opening date of the new S. Capitol st. bridge, set by the District Commissioners for Thursday, January 12, will probably be postponed to Saturday, January 14. Presumably the bridge will be ready for use on the twelfth. The reasons given by Southeast citizens groups and certain District officials for postponement seem to us to be selfish ones, namely (1) a better crowd can be expected on a Saturday, and (2) top District officials may be tied up on budget hearings on the twelfth.

Those of us who live in Southeast Washington and adjacent Maryland and work downtown have watched the piddling around on bridge work for over two years and have wasted time, gasoline, and miles in the Navy Yard and 11th st. bridge bottlenecks. We take a dim view of any further postponement.

What's one more delay—only two days? Thousands more wasted man-hours, thousands of extra miles traveled, and thousands of gallons of gasoline, as well as tempers, burned up.

Who cares whether the Commissioners dedicate the bridge before a big crowd? Let some District cop or stenographer do it.

"Restoring Citizenship"

Your January 8 editorial, "Restoring Citizenship," advocating the restoration of citizenship to several thousand native-born and naturalized Americans who lost theirs by voting in recent Italian elections, is incongruous and inconsistent with your usually fine adherence to American standards and traditions.

Did our American founding fathers make provisions for "en bloc" or any other kind of voting on the part of our citizens in the elections of foreign countries? Did not those naturalized American citizens of Italian birth study the United States Constitution before being given their citizenship papers? Did they not then swear to uphold the laws of the United States and renounce all allegiance to the country of their birth?

Would you and Representative Francis E. Walter be willing to welcome them if they had voted with the Socialist rather than with De Gasperi's so-called Christian Democrats? Does the fact that there was a danger of the Communists and their allies winning the Italian election justify the voiding of American principles by our citizens?

Further, if we allow and approve this action of these expatriates of one national origin, should we not allow American citizens of other national origins to vote in the elections held in their former countries?

CHARLES W. POTTER
Takoma Park, Md.

This is the most dismaying betrayal of democracy that I have seen. While one's elation over the results of the Italian elections was tempered by speculation over the influence to be attributed to threats of hell from the pulpit and threats of nonsupport by ECA, it is only now realized that the elections were rigged against the Communists by voting "several thousand" foreigners who had no intention of residing in the country, let alone being citizens.

Hoover Intervention

Mr. Hoover would have us repeat our mistakes by the idiocy of intervention in Formosa. He would thus commit us to a third world war. We must not be stampeded by hotheads into the initiation of another reign of slaughter. Our Secretary of State Acheson must be sustained.

Trujillo's Offenses

In 1937 thousands of innocent, pacific, defenseless Haitian civilians were massacred in my country, the Dominican Republic, by Trujillo's army. I did everything I could to arouse the conscience of the peoples of the world and to support the Haitian people against Trujillo. I united the Dominicans and the Haitians in New York and induced them and the National Negro Congress to act jointly.

Due to those activities, Trujillo had his Congress pass a law on November 30 of the same year—1937—declaring me "traitor to the fatherland." That law suspended my civic and political rights and I have been, consequently, since that time a "man without a country."

The Dominican Republic is morally responsible for the death of those thousands of Haitians and when my country regains its freedom and its constitutional government is reestablished, it should make all possible amends to their relatives.

I believe that Trujillo is responsible for the recent frustrated plot to assassinate the President of Haiti and the heads of the Haitian army. Trujillo's repeated offenses against Haiti and Cuba are of such a serious nature that it is incompatible with their national honor to maintain relations of any kind with his regime. Both countries should immediately break all relations with Trujillo.

Army Slighted

I noted with some degree of irritation that you have plastered in a headline in your January 8 edition the item that one lone Navy veteran attained one of the Phi Beta Kappa honors at George Washington University. I also noted when I perused the item that there were at least 10, if not 11, Army veterans who also attained this honor. But you'd never know it unless you read the fine print.

Department Of Justice Complicity In Illegal Wire Tapping

In his communication of January 7, James Lawrence Fly has demonstrated beyond question that wire tapping, as conducted by the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is not only a "dirty business" but also an illegal business. That such wire tapping is being carried on is no longer a matter of mere speculation. It is an admitted fact.

Attorney General McGrath's reply to Mr. Fly is that he sees "no reason at the present time for any change" in the Federal Bureau of Investigation's practices. In other words, the Attorney General of the United States, charged with the solemn responsibility of enforcing the "supreme law of the land," has publicly announced that his agents will continue to violate the law with his approval and blessing. His justification seems to be that these laws have been violated by the Department of Justice in the past.

It is difficult to reconcile the Attorney General's statement with his very fine past record as a member of the United States Senate and it is to be hoped that the statement was issued hurriedly and without time for careful consideration of its implications, for it strikes at the very heart of our form of government and poses questions of vital importance to the rights and liberties of the American people.

Is the Federal Bureau of Investigation above the law? May the Attorney General, in his sovereign discretion, decide what laws shall be obeyed and what laws shall be ignored, what laws he and his agents shall observe and what laws they shall defy?

Does consistent, unpunished violation of the law confer upon a lawbreaker the prescriptive right to continue to violate the law with impunity? How long can we expect the people of this country to respect the laws of the land when the Department of Justice sets an example of lawlessness? Are we to be governed hereafter by laws enacted by our duly elected representatives in Congress assembled or are we to be governed by the arbitrary edict of the Attorney General?

It should be remembered that the law against wire tapping is not just a rule of evidence. It is a criminal law. Violators may be fined up to $10,000 and imprisoned up to two years.

A Department of Justice which will not protect the privacy of citizens against illegal invasions by its own employes certainly cannot be relied upon to protect that privacy against the invasions of others—the congenital snooper, the unethical business competitor, the blackmail artist.

Is wire tapping necessary to protect us against spies and traitors? Fly has given the answer:

"If one traitor (caught by the FBI through wire tapping) could be named, the country would still be faced with the question as to whether it is willing to pay the price in the basic human liberties, in freedom from unwarranted search and seizures, in the sanctity of the home, in the freedom from the stealth and secrecy of underground snoopers, in the preservation of every basic confidential relation known to law, husband and wife, parent and child, minister and parishoner, doctor and patient, lawyer and client. The right of privacy and the assurance of that privacy in day-to-day communications on social and on business matters—indeed the whole theory of freedom of communication—is at stake."

If the Federal Bureau of Investigation persists in its present policy, the value of telephone service will, to a very substantial extent, be destroyed. Privacy has traditionally been recognized by both the Federal Communications Commission and by the telephone companies as an important element of service. The telephone subscriber is entitled to carry on his conversations, whether of a business or social nature, free from the eavesdropper. The law guarantees him that right. He pays for that right when he pays his telephone bill. But neither the Federal Communications Commission nor the telephone companies can effectively protect that right against the illegal encroachments of agents of the Department of Justice. Nor can the Department of Justice be reasonably expected to protect against the encroachment of others a right which the Department of Justice itself does not respect.

Martial World In Miniature

By Malvina Lindsay

Gun-Toting Children

NO ADULT to my knowledge has yet been threatened with an atom bomb by a ferocious child on the warpath, but no doubt that will come soon. On all sides I hear complaints of grown-ups who are being banged at or "shot dead" by youngsters with the toy revolvers and other weapons kindly Santa brought.

A friend of mine sitting beside an open window in a motor car found her head narrowly grazed by an arrow shot by a lad of 10, who was standing on the sidewalk picking off motorists. I myself encountered a 5-year-old on the sidewalk threatening playmates and passersby with a butcher knife. Mothers report even infants have caught the gun craze and are "banging" their fingers at pets and parents.

Hearing these reports and seeing the array of lethal toys in stores, it suddenly dawned on me that we had become as complacent to the imitation of war in the child world as we had to war preparation in the so-called adult one. Why, only a few years ago it seemed mothers' groups, educators, safety authorities, were embattled to discourage the sale and purchase of toy weapons, and parents and teachers were taking stern actions whenever a child pointed at anybody any device.

Yet . . . that must have been before the war, I reminded myself—back in the days when killing wasn't so popular. Was the war then responsible for this widespread arming of children? Or could it be that the present cold war was being mirrored by a hot one in the juvenile world?

GUN CARRYING increased among members of juvenile gangs after the war, New York welfare authorities discovered, and traditional gang weapons of snowballs, tin cans, stones, gave way to "Luger pistols." This was blamed partly on the bringing into the country of "souvenir" revolvers.

However, the parents I heard complaining about juvenile arming blamed this largely on comic books (the average child of 6 to 12 is said to keep up with 23 comic books), on radio and television programs, and on movies. The recent craze among youngsters for cowboy attire—encouraged by "Westerns" on video and in the movies—apparently had made the toy revolver in its holster a necessity. Also imagination in the use of weapons was spurred by tales and dramas of horrors and crime.

Why then, I wanted to know, didn't parents eliminate such stimulation, including the cowboy guns? But that was not so easy, it seemed, when the "other kids" were doing it. One couldn't make a hermit or a sissy out of one's child. What's more, some mothers even thought that playing with a gun might make a child a better soldier "if he ever had to fight."

I could only refer these parents to the recent report of the Child Study Association of America on comics, radios, movies and television, which in brief urges that parents be the bosses rather than the vassals of these media. One remedy suggested was to channel the activities of the child into creative pursuits, provide him hobbies, friends, places to go, things to see. Another was to become interested in what the child was listening to, reading or watching and try to guide his tastes.

AS TO MORE direct action on gun-toting and the toy arsenals, that would seem to call for united action by those parents who think the temptations to children to become gunmen have gone too far, and by those who do not believe that the reckless brandishing of a toy revolver builds the discipline and character a future defender of the country will need.

However, these parents are up against strong counter forces. Television sets are going at a rapid rate into many homes where parents don't have the time or understanding to oversee the programs their children see.

All communications media are feeding the hunger for excitement of both children and grown-ups. That could be one reason a visiting British juvenile judge was so surprised at the number of child crimes of violence in this country.

More than this, however, parents who want to bring up children in the arts of peace rather than of war find the shadow of an armaments race reaching into every corner of their homes. Weapons dominate headlines, and, worse still, thought.

However, that is no reason for futilely surrendering either to the toy revolver or the atom bomb. Adults surely have the ingenuity to substitute something else for killing in the child's world if they try hard enough. If they can't cope with a youngster on the loose with a toy pistol, there is little chance they can ever become master of the atom.

Today and Tomorrow

After Containment, What?

SENATOR CONNALLY came out of the closed meeting of the Foreign Relations Committee on Tuesday and reported that Secretary Acheson had said that "the line Japan-Okinawa-Philippines was our line of defense . . . that on this (italics mine) line the United States had an impregnable defense in this area." The Secretary had also said that "in southeast Asia, including Burma, India, Siam, Indo-China, Indonesia . . . about the most we can do is to encourage them and give them some aid under Point Four."

Lippmann

THESE statements of high policy mark a very great departure from the Truman Doctrine which Mr. Acheson, then the Undersecretary of State, had such a leading part in formulating nearly three years ago. His position on Tuesday was that the American line of defense is in the Pacific Ocean, but that on the line where communism is pushing forward the most we can do is to encourage the non-Communists and give them some technical and financial aid.

This is a very long way from the 1947 "policy of firm containment, designed," as Mr. George Kennan described it in his celebrated paper, "to confront the Russians with unalterable counterforce at every point where they show signs of encroaching upon the interests of a peaceful and a stable world."

MR. ACHESON'S difficulty today in dealing with his Republican critics, with General MacArthur and Senator Knowland and the others, is that while they are still the true believers in the Truman doctrine of firm containment, Mr. Acheson, confronted with the realities, has had to backslide. His trouble in Congress is that while teacher has changed his mind, the pupils still believe and repeat what he taught them. They have been oversold on a theory which, because it rested on a miscalculation of American military and economic power, has proved to be unworkable and is, in Asia at any rate, being scrapped by its authors.

AS A result, a vacuum has opened up in our policy wherever the line of American defense does not coincide with the front line of the Communist advance. What is to be our policy in the areas beyond the lines of our own defense? We do not propose to make these areas impregnable. We do not wish to surrender them to the Soviet Union. What then do we do?

Is it not evident that as the policy of firm containment at the frontiers of communism has broken down, a new policy is required for the areas which we cannot promise to defend and yet cannot afford to surrender?

THOUGH the problem of defining a policy of this kind may appear to be novel and at first thought insoluble, the problem has often been solved before. The classic solution for nations which wish to be independent but cannot be defended is neutrality. That will, I believe, be the solution sought by more and more of the nations of Asia and Europe which lie in the disputed and threatened borderland between the two giant powers, each capable of devastating their lands, neither capable of protecting them against devastation.

That should be, I believe, the solution we offer them in place of the "containment" which we now admit we cannot enforce. There is no other solution—once we realize that we have no decisive military power on the mainland inside Asia. Nor is there any other solution for Germany, for Austria, for Scandinavia, for eastern Europe, once we recognize the consequences of the Soviet achievement of the atomic bomb.

The only alternative to an indecisive war in which they can hope for no security against devastation from both sides is the progressive neutralization of a great buffer belt from Scandinavia to the Mediterranean.

THE POLICY of containment, which is one of military encirclement up to the frontiers of the Soviet Union, is a military and political impossibility. We cannot give adequate military support to all the nations around the circle. And they will not long stand there unsupported, undefended, but provocatively, on that circle. They cannot be the frontier posts of a military system which cannot insure their security in case of war. They must do something else. That something else is to disalign themselves, to disengage themselves no matter what their ideological sympathies, and to seek security in as much neutrality as the balance of power among the great nations enables them to maintain.

THIS IS the way the world is going on both sides of the iron curtain. This is the way India and Pakistan are going. It is the way all but the most unregenerate and reactionary Germans are going. It is the only way Tito and all the countries infected by Titoism can go without risking the utter disaster of civil war. It is the way Japan is bound to try to go, now that it is subject to atomic attack from Siberia. It is the way a wise and enlightened policy might induce Red China to go.

IT IS the way we shall have to encourage them to go, once we recognize honestly what the limitations of our own military power mean.

Newsprint Monopoly

By Marquis Childs

Squeeze On The Newspapers

LAST WEEK the New York Sun, a newspaper 116 years old, suspended publication. With hardly a splash the waters closed over the Sun with all its tradition and with its long record of journalistic adventure.

Childs

Pursuing the same narrow course that appears to have been one of the reasons for the Sun's decline in recent years, the management in the moment of the paper's dying gasp sought to put the blame on increased labor costs. The employes of the Sun, many of them facing joblessness, made a quick rejoinder. And the New York Newspaper Guild, which had no organization on the Sun, pointed out that increased labor costs had been less than rising paper costs "forced by the newsprint trust."

Here is a matter that seems to me to deserve the most searching consideration. If there is monopoly control in the newsprint industry, and that charge has been repeatedly made, it strikes directly at the free market in opinion and ideas. The number of newspapers has been constantly declining and in an increasing number of communities only one point of view is available on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

Figures have been given to me which are startling in relation to this business to which some of us are attached for both practical and sentimental reasons. They show that the profits of eight of the largest newsprint mills have nearly trebled from 1945 through 1948. During this period the price of newsprint went from $58.50 to $100 a ton and the profits of the eight companies from $38,503,605 to $96,211,729.

THIS SAME study shows that for what is reported to be a representative cross section of American newspapers, profits in the same period decreased more than 54 percent. Experts who have examined these figures point out that the comparison is somewhat unjust in that the newspaper cross section includes the Hearst chain. With the Hearst papers left out, the newspaper profit picture would be more favorable.

The newsprint companies reply that for the biggest concerns profit is based not on newsprint alone but on a variety of other paper products. While this may be true, the profits of those firms dealing exclusively in newsprint are at just about as high a level as those with diverse production.

What is significant is that newsprint prices and profits are at an all-time high. Although the Canadian dollar has been devalued by 10 percent, leaders in the Canadian newsprint industry have said that this would make no difference in the price and they have had the baking of the Canadian government.

In 1946, however, when the American dollar was pegged at $1.10 as against the $1 Canadian exchange, these same newsprint leaders raised the price from $68 to $74.80. At least two of the large firms gave the difference in exchange as a justification for the 10 percent increase.

The motivation of the Canadian government is, of course, understandable. It is the acute dollar shortage put alongside the fact that the demand for newsprint was held up while the demand for other products has fallen off. But that does not alter the seriousness of the squeeze put on American newspapers.

REPRESENTATIVE Wright Patman's Small Business Committee in the House has compiled some figures on the newsprint industry and on the method of uniform pricing made effective through a zoning system. Patman indicates there may be a public investigation of the charges that a small group exercises monopolistic domination over the industry.

This has happened before. During the Eightieth Congress a Senate Small Business Committee under the chairmanship of Senator Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska looked into the newsprint situation. The Wherry committee came up with a recommendation that newsprint sources should be developed in Alaska with, if necessary, help from the Government in furthering access to Alaska's great stands of timber. Little if anything has been done to carry out this recommendation.

Some time ago the antitrust division of the Department of Justice started an investigation into monopolistic practices in the newsprint industry. Investigators called on Canadian companies to submit their records. They refused and were backed up in their refusal by the Canadian government.

As a consequence the investigation was dropped. The Department of Justice referred the whole matter to the Federal Trade Commission which had earlier conducted a futile inquiry.

Certainly, rising labor costs have contributed to the squeeze play in which many newspapers are caught. By an unhappy irony the mounting spiral of costs works to cut down the total number of jobs even though those still employed get higher pay. And it also narrows down the market in ideas that is so essential to a vital and living democracy.

CIO Electric Union Challenges Leftists to Election at GE

The International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE-CIO) yesterday challenged the left-wing United Electrical Workers (UE) on a consent election among 100,000 General Electric workers to determine which union should represent the GE employes.

The challenge—which suggests February 10 for the ballot—while seemingly simple, further confounds an already confused situation. UE has come out for a consent election simultaneously at General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors. IUE has turned down this move on the ground it will slow down elections coming up at GM and Westinghouse. GE has come out for consent elections at its plants, but wants modification of the 99 voting units.

Jim Carey, who heads IUE—which broke away from UE when the latter was recently kicked out of the CIO because of alleged pro-Communist activities — declared yesterday that the fight between the two unions for the right to represent the electrical workers was no mere rivalry.

"It's an important part of the cold war" said Carey, referring the current war of nerves between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Carey said that UE and FE could prove their good faith by accepting his challenge to quick elections, without setting up legal barriers. He added, however, he would not permit delaying maneuvers in such an election, but would insist on the National Labor Relations Board going ahead with its hearings preliminary to ordering elections at the three electrical companies.

RFC Rejects Lustron Plan To Reorganize

By the United Press

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation yesterday rejected as "wholly unsatisfactory" a proposed reorganization plan submitted by Lustron Corporation, the big Columbus, Ohio, prefabricated home manufacturer.

RFC officials refused to reveal details of the Lustron proposal, emphasizing that the action does not mean the RFC plans to foreclose its multi-million dollar loans to the company.

"But it does indicate which way the wind is blowing," one official said.

It has been reported that some top RFC officials believe Lustron should make a greater effort to obtain funds from private sources.

The company already has received $37,500,000 in Government funds to finance mass production of its all-metal prefabricated dwelling and is said to be seeking more working capital.

The RFC demanded the reorganization proposal in view of the fact that Lustron has been losing money steadily.

The RFC action seemed certain to add fuel to congressional demands for a full-dress investigation of the lending agency's policies, including large loans recently granted to Lustron, the Kaiser-Frazer Automobile Co. and Waltham Watch Co.

W. L. & T. Ups Surplus, Votes Extra of $2

By S. Oliver Goodman

More evidence of a satisfactory year in local banking came yesterday from the Washington Loan & Trust Co., where directors declared an extra dividend of $2 a share in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $3. The dividends are payable February 1 to stock of record January 20.

Also, W. L. & T. directors authorized the transfer of $250,000 from undivided profits to surplus, making the latter account $2,750,000.

At the reorganization meeting, directors reelected Alfred H. Lawson and all other officers. They are: Charles H. Doing, board chairman; George M. Fisher, senior vice president; Leonard Marbury, vice president and trust officer; Ralph Endicott, vice president; Herbert W. Primm, vice president and secretary; R. S. Perguson, assistant vice president; George O. Schweinhaut, treasurer and assistant secretary; James M. Mason, Harry L. Smith, Harry L. Downey, John L. Cain and Jack Wild, assistant treasurers; Bernard L. Amiss, trust officer and assistant secretary; Harry W. Gauss, Henry H. Lefferts and Mary L. Chadwick, assistant trust officers; Edward L. Brady, real estate officer and assistant secretary; Frederick Gradeaux and Francis M. Wilcox, assistant real estate officers; Roger S. Quinn, auditor, and Frederick M. Bradley, general counsel.

NEW DIRECTORS: Charles I. Kaplan and J. Maynard Magruder have been added to the directorate of the Shirlington Trust Co. in nearby Virginia. Kaplan is secretary-treasurer of the Standard Construction Co., Washington, and Magruder is an Arlington real estate and insurance executive now entering his fourth term as a Virginia legislator. Reelected directors are Joseph Cherner, Frank L. Ball, George F. Hohein, S. Miles Montgomery, George A. Hatzes, Carlyle R. Boguess and Eugene J. Olmi.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: C. F. Jacobsen, president of National Metropolitan Bank, has been elected a director of Fidelity Storage Co. . . . Vincent F. Callahan, former Washington newspaperman, has been named director of promotion and public service at Radio Station WQQW. . . . Garrison Norton, former Assistant Secretary of State, has become asasociated with William A. M. Burden & Co. and will have offices in Washington . . . Harry T. Bodman, a former director of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., has been promoted to general vice president of the National Bank of Detroit . . . John G. Pool, jr., formerly in the promotion department of The Washington Post, has been named assistant director of advertising and publicity for the National Association of Ice Industries here . . . Richard L. Johnson, formerly with ECA, has become assistant to the president of the Glenn L. Martin Co. . . . Samuel McClements, jr., has been named manager of sales for rail materials and commercial forgings division of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. . . . James W. Donaldson has been appointed general sales manager of Phillips Packing Co.

HONORS: Three Washington department stores received honors in an advertising contest sponsored nationally by the National Retail Dry Goods Association. The Hecht Co. won first prize for large stores for institutional advertising: Julius Garfinckel & Co. for fashions, and Lansburgh's for its "Jolly Easter" theme.

ODD LOTS: The Electronic Computer Corp. has moved its headquarters from Washington to Brooklyn . . . John D. Marsh, Certified Life Underwriter, will entertain 60 members of his staff, including their wives, at a dinner Friday in the Columbia Country Club . . . A new issue of 120,000 shares of convertible preferred stock of Seaboard Finance Co. is being offered at $27 a share by the First Boston Corp. and associates . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index this week climbed 3 cents to $5.76 compared with a week ago, but was 5.3 percent below the year-ago level at $6.08.

CORRECTION: In a listing of reelected officers at the Union Trust Co., one line was inadvertently lost. It should have read Elmer Flather, vice president and treasurer; Irving Zirpel, secretary. The error is regretted.

REELECTED: All officers of Second National Bank were reelected yesterday as follows:

Victor B. Deyber, board chairman; John A. Reilly, president; William M. Hannay, vice president; Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, vice president and cashier; Stuart S. Ogilvie, vice president; Henry P. Hoffman, Gerald E. Keene, Tudor Whiton, assistant vice presidents; Harriman J. Chenoweth, Donald R. Hollingsworth and Frank A. Miles, assistant cashiers; Edward F. Colladay, counsel and trust officer; William B. Wolf, assistant trust officer.

E. W. Hase Installed

Edward W. Hase of Atlantic Coast Line Railroad was installed as president of the Washington Passenger Association at the thirty-third annual banquet last night in the Mayflower. He succeeded Robert W. Basher of New York Central.

Group Makes Plea For Hines School

Falling enrollment in white junior high schools may mean the end of a long-proposed replacement for the old Hine Junior High School 7th and C sts. se.

A request for funds to begin construction of the building was withdrawn from 1951 budget estimates by the Commissioners with the approval of school officials.

Members of the Southeast Business Men's Association yesterday petitioned the Commissioners to restore the fund and said they were "greatly distressed" to learn it had been eliminated.

Enrollment Cut Blamed

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said the new building has been "postponed" because of dropping enrollments at Eliot and Stuart. The two schools are in adjoining northeast areas.

It was learned that school officials are reconsidering the entire building project which calls for acquisition of additional land and the construction of a school for 1000 students. Funds for the land purchase also were eliminated from budget requests.

The budget without the Hine item was presented by school officers and members of the Board of Education. It calls for the expenditure of $28,822,300 in fiscal 1951.

In a letter to the Commissioners the Southeast businessmen said they had understood a new Hine would be constructed if the sales tax was enacted.

"This association was one of the first organizations within the District to indorse the sales tax," the letter said.

Described as "Inadequate"

The Hine building, which houses 665 students, was described in the letter as "very old, inadequate and a fire hazard."

Louis F. Frick, secretary of the organization, said that southeast citizens have been campaigning for a replacement for old Hine for three years.

The main section of the building was constructed in 1891 and formerly housed Eastern High School. A wing of the building is the old Tower's Elementary School built in 1887. A third floor auditorium has been closed because of fire code violations.

Enrollments at Eliot and Stuart Junior High Schools have decreased by 115 students in the past year. Eliot, 18th and B sts. ne., has a capacity of 810 students and an enrollment of 681. Stuart, 5th and E sts. ne., is used at capacity with 759 students.

Virginia U. Left Farm By Physicist

The University of Virginia will eventually receive the bulk of the $160,000 estate of Dr. William Jackson Humphreys, a noted meteorological physicist who died here November 10.

This was disclosed yesterday when Dr. Humphreys' will was filed for probate in District Court.

He resided here at 1026 15th st. nw., and was connected with the Weather Bureau before his retirement in 1935.

Provision is made under Dr. Humphreys' will for a trust, the income to go for life to his widow, Mrs. Margaret A. Humphreys, three nephews and a niece.

At the termination of the trust, the property goes to the niversity of Virginia, with the bulk of it to be used for research in physics.

An unusual provision of the will gives an immediate bequest of a 700-acre farm in Monroe County, West Virginia, to the university

House Group Confers on Crime Probe

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A special five-man House District subcommittee went into its first huddle of the year yesterday with the investigators it hired to look into Washington crime and law enforcement.

The special group, headed by Representative James D. Davis (D., Ga.), conferred for more than two hours behind closed doors with Hyman I. Fischbach, chief counsel, and John Woog, investigator.

"It was all interesting," said Chairman Davis "but that's about all I can tell you." The investigating group is a subcommittee of the House District Committee.

Davis said disclosures about the investigation at this point might jeopardize the operation. The investigators have been working through Police Court, and other law enforcement records, making a preliminary search while Congress was away, for material to become the basis of hearings.

Davis said open hearings would be held, but before arrangements are made, the special committee will have more private meetings. The next one will be held next

Davis said the committee's budget of $10,000 will last through the end of this month—an indication that Congress shortly will be asked for more money.

Fischbach said the probe so far has turned up some new slants on how the law is being enforced. He was cautioned by Davis not to say any more.

Davis said the inquiry is covering the police, coroner, courts, prosecuting offices, probation and parole systems and the penal institutions.

Committee members indicated their impression of the inquiry to date is that the police are doing a good job, but that there may be some weaknesses elsewhere in law enforcement, and even in basic statutes.

Davis announced appointment of Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) to the special investigating committee, to succeed the late Representative George Bates (R., Mass.).

Seventh Day Adventist Youth Program Outline

Hobbies, crafts, nature clubs and social activities will be features of the Seventh Day Adventist Church youth program this year, Elder W. N. Wittenberg told church officials of the Potomac Conference last night.

Speaking in the Takoma Park Church, Willow and Carroll aves., Elder Wittenberg said 3000 youths in 53 Adventist churches will be affected by the program.

Elder Archa Dart, education superintendent, urged provision of good facilities for the 25 church schools. The annual conference will end today.

Restaurant to Be Sold For Overdue D. C. Taxes

Jimmie's Restaurant, 409 10th st. nw., will be sold at auction on the premises today at 10:30 a. m. to satisfy $8305.05 owed the District in personal property and corporation income taxes.

Guy W. Pearson, District tax collector, said similar actions are being prepared by his office against about 4000 other income tax delinquents. These bills, based on 1948 income, should have been paid in April and October, 1949, he said.

Impressive Study Of Small Things

By Richard L. Coe

THE PALACE has a fine war picture in "Battleground."

What makes this impressive is its respect for small things. You follow a platoon of airborne infantry through the Battle of the Bulge. You learn to know them as individuals by hearing their small talk, by examining their relationships with each other, by living with them through the bitter Christmas of 1944.

There is no attempt at flashback nor at an over-all summation of the war. Screen Writer Robert Pirosh has limited his attention to the men during their critical days. From this wisdom of restraint has resulted a remarkably integrated and moving film.

And the performances are fully worthy of this trust. There is force and honesty in them all.

Van Johnson, for example, has a chance to play a straightforward, likable chap without the cloying cuteness so disliked by those who've seen him in tailored roles. He's excellent. George Murphy is fine as the overage "Pop" who has a discharge but has no transport back to base. Jerome Courtland is effective as a lanky hillbilly who longs only to go home. Marshall Thompson is moving as the green recruit who finds himself in a hardened outfit whose members have long since found their individual spots.

Pirosh Credit High

But the most impressive single contribution is surely the script of Pirosh. He evidently made careful note of GI phrases, of the little things about Army living; having done so, he's made them seem natural and not freakish.

So "Battleground" will bring back a small phase of a great conflict. Its appeal will be especially to those who can recognize the value of those minor, overwhelming frustrations, but it will have a sure pull on those who wondered, far away, what life could have been like that unforgettable Christmas in the Bulge.

"Battleground" is, in short, one of the better pictures of last year and stands likely to be one of the better of this.

THE MOUNT VERNON Players tonight open a 15-day run in Benn Levy's comedy, "Mrs. Moonlight" . . . Performances are given in the Undercroft Auditorium, 900 Massachusetts ave., under the direction of Don Pimm . . . In the cast are Barbara Lucas, Tony Campbell, Rosemary Dowery, Helen O'Brien, William Cain, Terry Gallegos, Sally Hughes and Donald Pearce.

"HAMLET" — "The" Laurence Olivier "Hamlet," as it's come to be known—has embarked on a tour of the neighborhood theaters . . . Eighteen local houses have signed to present the picture, offering special rates to groups of neighborhood students . . . Teachers are requested to contact their local theater managers to arrange for this special offer . . . Today you'll find it at the Apex, Circle, Fairlawn, Penn, Tivoli, Uptown, Bethesda, Hyattsville, Silver and Falls Church State.

THE K-B chain writes that its Apex Theater has played or will play eight of this corner's ten best list . . . Which, if this party didn't consider anything two blocks from E st. the hinterlands, would mean that we'd spend all our waking moments up at 4813 Massachusetts ave., postal address of the Apex.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY last night presented a unique bill of three one-act plays under the direction of Dr. Severino Montano, to run through Saturday night in the Clendenen Gymnasium on the campus . . . These are Conrad Seiler's "Why I Am A Bachelor," Christopher Morley's "Thursday Evening" and Anton Chekov's "The Marriage Proposal" . . . Reservations may be made at Metropolitan 0258 or Woodley 6800.

"TOBACCO ROAD," played by all-Negro cast, opens a pre-New York run Friday night at the Howard Theater under sponsorship of Jack Kirkland, original producer of the fabulously successful Jeeter Lester story.

NAB Hails Ruling On Press 'Gag'

The National Association of Broadcasters said yesterday the Supreme Court's action in the Baltimore "gag rule" case is a victory for the "American concept of free speech."

The court Monday refused to review a Maryland Court of Appeals decision that the Baltimore City courts have no right to put restrictions on the publication of pretrial news in crime cases.

NAB President Justin Miller said the court's action means:

"That henceforth radio stations and newspapers may report news concerning crime committed in Maryland, in accordance with the generally accepted American rule, rather than the English rule which formerly prevailed in that State."

Death Scene Is Reality For Italian Film Actor

Rome, Jan. 11 (AP).—Film Actor Domenico Orsini was supposed to portray a dying soldier during the shooting of a battle scene on a movie lot near here.

As Orsini sagged to the ground, his rifle butt struck a live bomb, placed on the set for use in a later scene. The bomb exploded. Orsini was killed.

Musical a Little Wide of Mark

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

IN ACCORDANCE with a New Year's resolve I have made to say something nice at least once a month, I shall record that everybody seems to be trying in "There's a Girl in My Heart," which is now brightening the National Theater. Further courtesy honesty precludes my showing.

The movie is a musical about Old New York. The songs are derivative, the dances are creaky rehashes of all the old routines, the jokes are leaden. The story, stacked against the rest of this soggy material, might have had possibilities, but it was so handled by Producer-Director Arthur Dreifuss that it appeared to be in death throes most of the way.

Lee Bowman plays a man trying to pull a fast one on a sweet young widow (Elyse Knox). He takes things very easy, so easy, in fact, that he bids fair to join the illustrious company of George Raft and Alan Ladd as one of the great immobiles of the screen. Miss Knox is very long on finely chiseled features and sorrowfully short on talent. Gloria Jean, once a child soprano, is still a soprano and still pretty darned chubby-cheeked, if you ask me. She plays a choir-girl grown up enough to have a crush on Bowman in this, and I suppose that's all right. Peggy Ryan is around, doing her dances, and Lon Chaney plays the large, stupid barkeep without which there could be no movies about old New York.

The incidental flashes in this film are brilliant. I don't see how Dreifuss thinks these things up. Couple on a tandem, for instance, rides down a New York street caroling "A Bicycle Built for Two." Dreifuss had a hand in the title song, "There's a Girl in My Heart," by the way, and he better stick to producing poor movies. For that matter, Robert Bilder, who wrote the rest of the new songs, might give serious consideration to returning to whatever his former line of work was.

Bowman, as you will have surmised, is a changed man and gets Miss Knox before we're through with all this. (I have an uneasy feeling about Miss Knox. Didn't she used to play halfback for the Los Angeles Rams?)

Lowell Thomas has a short subject at the National about air power. It's sponsored by the Air Force. "A second-best air force," booms Thomas, solemnly, "is like a second-best poker hand."

"THERE'S A GIRL IN MY HEART." Allied Artists release for Sandre Productions. Produced and directed by Arthur Dreifuss. Screen play by Arthur Hoerl and John Eugene Hasy, added dialogue by McElbert Moore. Music by Dreifuss, Robert Bilder, Harry Dacre and Charles K. Harris. Photographed by Phillip Tannura. At the National.

Swiss Drug May Reduce Heart Attacks

Pittsburgh, Jan. 11 (AP). — A Cornell University medical professor has revealed a new drug he says may cut down heart attacks and save more than 70,000 lives a year. The drug, known as tromexan, was developed in Switzerland.

Dr. Irving S. Wright, a leading researcher in blood vessel diseases, said the drug seems to be the best yet developed for prevention of blood clots which annually kill 200,000 Americans and disable many more.

Before the Pitsburgh Academy of Medicine last night, he said tests indicate tromexan is better than any drug now used against coronary thrombosis. Tromexan goes to work within 24 hours and practically stops thinning the blood 24 hours later, he declared. This is good because in some cases, especially in patients who also have ulcers, doctors can't keep thinning the blood too long lest hemorrhages occur.

The leading drug now used against blood clotting, Dr. Wright explained, is dicumarol, made from the same materials as aspirin. Dicumarol thins the blood — but usually doesn't go to work for two to four days.

Animal Tests May Produce 'Skin Banks'

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Animal experimentation which may lead to the establishment of human "skin banks" is under way at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md.

Doctors guiding the studies envision the day when human skin pared from cadavers can be preserved in solution for eventual use in battle burn casualties or in peacetime accidents.

The Bethesda study is just one phase of a larger project begun by the Navy July 1 on methods to preserve tissues for transplant to individuals. First clinical progress of the over-all project was the setting up of a "bone bank" on September 1 at the Naval Hospital.

Pioneering work in the skin-grafting is being done at the research laboratories by Drs. George W. Hyatt (lieut., U. S. Navy) and Albert Marrangoni (lieut. j. g.).

Already, Dr. Marrangoni reported yesterday, they have succeeded in keeping rabbit skin alive for periods of six to eight weeks, and successfully transplanting it to other rabbits.

The preservative is a solution of homologous serum (blood serum with its anticoagulating factors unremoved), to which both penicillin and streptomycin have been added. Unlike bone, which is preserved at sub-freezing temperatures around zero degrees Fahrenheit, the skin is preserved, like whole blood, at a temperature just above freezing.

The present work has been confined to grafting on rabbits, Dr. Marrangoni emphasized, but if it works on these animals it may well work on humans, he added. With human skin, however, it will be necessary to classify the donor skin under the four major blood groupings, a factor which need not be considered in the work with animals, he said.

As to the possibility of using cadavers as the sole or major source of human skin for transplant, Dr. Marrangoni said it has been scientifically established that the skin of the dead is "viable" when removed four to six hours after death.

Whether or not the transplanted skin will make permanent growth has not been determined, Dr. Marrangoni said. The important thing, however, is that it apparently takes hold, at least as a lifesaving temporary protection against body fluid loss, just as freshly transplanted skin does in present clinical use.

Another phase of the tissue preservation and transplantation project deals with the storage of blood vessels.

Hikes for Dente, Robinson

Griffith Cutting Pay of Scarborough, Others

By Shirley Povich

A BATCH OF CHEERLESS registered mail went out this week from the Washington Baseball Club to the addresses at Mount Olivet, N. C. and Olive Springs, Tenn., and to Winter Park, Fla., and South Ozone Park, N. Y.

POVICH

Clark Clark Griffith is notifying three of his pitchers, Ray Scarborough, Sid Hudson and Joe Haynes, and Third Baseman Eddie Yost of pay cuts in their 1950 contracts.

Uucle Sam's postmen are taking happier tidings to First Baseman Eddie Robinson at Baltimore, Shortstop Sam Dente at North Arlington, N. J., and Pitcher Dick Weik at Waterloo, Iowa. They're getting raises, for valuable services rendered.

Scarborough, the object of frenzied bidding by other clubs in the league, obviously is not honored by Griffith in the same degree despite the fact he was the Nats' leading pitcher. The Nats president, not quite enchanted by Scarborough's 13 wins and 11 defeats with an eighth-place club, is whacking a big chunk out of the pitcher's pay estimated at $17,000 a year.

In fact, Griffith recoiled after a close scrutiny of Scarborough's 13-11 record, which revealed that the rugged right hander had been rapped for an average of 4.50 earned runs per game. "That's not good pitching," he said bluntly before leaving on his Florida vacation.

Three Washington pitchers did, indeed, have earned run averages superior to Scarborough's. And it was pointed out at Griffith Stadium that "some of his wins came cheaply. He was credited with two of them after pitching a total of only 2 1/3 innings."

Barring a successful squawk by Scarborough and a salary compromise heavily in his favor, the pitcher is fated to lose his distinction as the highest paid member of the Nats, an honor he inherited after Mickey Vernon was traded to Cleveland. The new top-bracket man will be Eddie Robinson, whose pay was upped considerably in view of his .294 batting average, his 18 home runs, 27 doubles and 78 runs batted in.

BUT ROBINSON didn't get the biggest pay boost. That honor fell to shortstop Sam Dente whom Griffith rated an even more valuable guy last season. However, Dente is not yet one of the upper-bracket men on the club. He was playing for very modest wages last season after the Nats took over his contract from the Browns.

Griffith's wage-slashing binge even cut across family lines. His son-in-law Joe Haynes, took the biggest pay cut. Haynes flopped sadly with his mere two wins and his nine defeats, plus an horrendous earnedrun average of 6.28 per game. It was a bigger cut-back than Sid Hudson's, following Hudson's 8-17 record.

Buddy Lewis, too, is taking a salary rap after rapping the ball for only a .245 average last season. But this is one year when Griffith will have no pay wrangle with Lewis, a notoriously hard bargainer in former seasons.

As if in acknowledgement of his poor season Lewis told the Nats' owner before taking leave of the club in October, "Send m any kind of a contract, I'll sign it."

YOUNG DICK WEIK will get a substantial pay boost, despite his 3-12 record. He is being paid on his potential, with Griffith convinced the towering 22-yearold right hander will be one of the top pitchers in the league.

For others, the status quo prevails in the pay department—Ed Stewart, Clyde Vollmer, Mickey Harris, Al Evans, Jake Early Lloyd, Hittle, Dick Welteroth Gil Coan, Sherry Robertson and Al Kozar.

Ray Slams Back Unsigned Contract

The 1950 contract sent him by the Nats has been given a quick pitch back into the lap of Clark Griffith, Ray Scarborough told The Washington Post last night.

"I put it back in the mails unsigned," said Scarborough, "and it's the club's next move. I was surprised that they tried to cut me, and that is putting it mildly. But I didn't put it mildly in my letter to the club."

Stewart upped his batting average, but lapsed far below the previous season in runs batted in. Outfielder Roberto Ortiz signed a two-year contract when he reported late last season.

For Irving Noren, the rookie outfielder bought from Hollywood for $70,000, there will be a 100 percent pay increase. That isn't sensational, however. He was drawing only $450 a month in the Coast League, a tip-off on the wage scales in Branch Rickey's farm system. And Noren the year before had been the most valuable player in the Double A. Texas League. The Nats were paying players on their Chattanooga club as much as $600 a month.

MANAGER BUCKY HARRIS, who places much store in relief pitching, has plans to adapt Mickey Harris to that job next season despite the pitcher's insistence last year that he performs best as a starter.

To the suggestion that the pitcher might balk at taking a relief job and forfeiting the chance at bigger contracts as a regular starter, Manager Harris had a ready answer. "He won't have to worry about that," said Bucky. "Joe Page is proving that relief pitchers can make a lot of money. He's the highest-paid man on the Yankees' staff."

Harris is expressing an interest, too, in Senor Conrado Marrero, a rugged righthander the Nats are getting from their Havana club where he won 25 and lost only 8 games last season. "I hope this Marrere hasn't slipped any," said Harris. "The last time I saw him he was beating my 1948 Yankee team, 2 to 1, in a game we played in Cuba."

10 More Code Violators Bared

Virginia Fights NCAA Expulsion Threat

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The University of Virginia, Virginia Tech, Virginia Military Academy and The Citadel will carry their fight against alleged "hypocrisy" in the NCAA sanity code to the floor of the annual convention tomorrow.

The four Southern schools and three others, identity undisclosed, have been accused by the NCAA of violating the code adopted two years ago. All seven have been recommended for expulsion.

The three Virginia schools and The Citadel have acknowledged their infractions, criticized the code as an instrument of "hypocrisy" and announced they would fight the expulsion move to the finish, demanding a member-by-member floor vote, if necessary.

Tomorrow the compliance committee of the NCAA will present its case against the seven schools to a joint session of the NCAA Executive Committee and executive council.

It's a Closed Affair

The council is composed of officers and various vice presidents of the eight districts around the country.

The accused members will be allowed to argue their side if they wish. It's understood Virginia and Virginia Tech representatives will appear before the combined meeting tomorrow—a closed affair.

If the executive committee and council decide to abide by the recommendations for expulsion then the matter will be laid before the convention as a whole. This meeting is Saturday.

Rumors around the hotel lobbies are that efforts will be made for the NCAA and the recalcitrants to iron out their difficulties before the big meeting and thus avoid a showdown.

But the forces from Virginia were scheduled to arrive today, geared for battle. They have announced the sanity code is impractical and they can't abide by it.

Showdown Due Saturday

A two-third vote of the membership present is necessary for banishment, which would prevent the ostracized schools from scheduling NCAA members in sports. A showdown is slated Saturday.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association put its finger on ten more institutions today as violators of the sanity code but announced no action would be taken against them at the present meeting.

Clarence P. Houston of Tufts, chairman of the NCAA's policing agency known as the Constitutional Compliance Committee, made the disclosure at a press conference. He declined to identify the institutions.

The ten schools on the griddle are in addition to the seven who have been recommended for expulsion in the general sessions this week.

101 Schools Questioned

Houston, a soft-spoken, gray-haired former athletic director, said 101 colleges about which there had been complaints were sent questionnaires during the past year. Ninety-five came back with prompt replies, five asked for delays and the other hasn't been heard from, he said.

Of the replies, Houston said, infractions in the sanity code were evident at 10 member institutions.

Blocking Restricted

Two-Platoon Rule Upheld By Coaches

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—College football coaches voted today to keep the two-platoon system and made a concession to the smaller schools by liberalizing the free substitution rule.

In an all-day session, the coaches rules committee recommended retention of the controversial free substitution standard which permits the deploying of full 11-man teams as units.

They went further and recommended that each team be allowed to substitute one man after each down without incurring a penalty.

At present a team is penalized 5 yards for making a substitution when the clock is running.

Lou Little, chairman of the committee, said this is designed to help those teams unable to enter into platoon football.

"It gives them a continuous change after each down if they want it," he said.

This recommendation along with several others of less importance will be presented to the National Collegiate Athletic Association rules committee, which meets in Pinehurst, N. C., next Monday.

The coaches' recommendations are normally adopted by the NCAA rules committee, which is headed by Bill Bingham of Harvard.

Here are the other recommendations:

1. That the coin tossing ceremony be staged 15 minutes before game time to enable earlier announcement of starting lineups.

2. If the substitution rule is adopted as constructed, that time outs be reduced from four to three for each half.

3. That stricter restrictions be placed on offensive blocking, particularly as relating to elbowing.

4. That officials be realigned on the field to approximate their position when the ball is on the goal line. This would put the umpire on one side of the scrimmage, the head linesman on the other, and bring up the field judge. The referee would keep his regular position. This is designed to give the officials a better view of the play and prevent origination of plays before the ball is snapped.

5. Return to the 1948 rule on personal fouls, designating the type of foul committed. At the present time personal fouls cover several violations.

Knicks Beat Caps, 73-72; Nichols Hurt

Special to The Post

New York, Jan. 11.—The Washington Caps took a one-point misstep on the comeback trail, losing to New York, 73-72, in an NBA game before 2000 in the 69th Regiment Armory tonight.

Leading for most of the first three quarters and by four points, 64-60, with six minutes to play, the Caps yielded four quick baskets at close range to Ernie Vandeweghe and Carl Braun, and fell short with a counter-rally in the last minute.

Loss of height advantage and frequent fouls were the chief elements in Washington's defeat. Jack Nichols, the high-scoring center, suffered a fractured nose in the closing seconds of the first half, and Chuck Gilmur and Chuck Halbert fouled out in the opening minutes of the last quarter. The Knicks scored 21 free throws to Washington's 12.

Fred Scolari, the game's high scorer with 21 points, was the most damaging Cap player. He made eight straight points in pacing Washington to an early 17-5 lead, which New York whittled to 37-36 at the half.

Then, when the Knicks went ahead for the first time at 51-49 in the third quarter, Scolari immediately tallied five more points. The last quarter started at 54-all, and twice Scolari regained the lead for Washington with long one-handers.

The loss prevented the Caps from reaching the .500 mark and second place. New York made its bulge over Washington six full games.

Colonials Win In Overtime

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—George Washington ran away with the game in an overtime period here tonight to register its fifth Southern Conference victory in seven starts with a 62-56 decision over the University of Richmond's scrapping Spiders.

Richmond led throughout most of the game and went off the floor at intermission with a 35-28 margin. The Colonials overtook the Spiders after nine minutes of the second half on a field goal by John Moffatt.

Three minutes later, the Spiders went in front again on a goal by Al Rinaldi and they stayed ahead until Moffatt sank a free throw to knot the count at 53-all with two minutes left. Neither team was able to score in the final two minutes.

"SEE YOU NEXT WEEK"—Sam Snead (left) and Ben Hogan shake hands at the Riviera Country Club in Los Angeles yesterday as officials announced that their heralded playoff for the Los Angeles Open title was being postponed until next Wednesday because of rain

They'll Play Off Next Wednesday

Snead-Hogan Match Rained Out

By Pete Arthur

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—Rain washed out the twenty-fourth annual Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament playoff today, forcing postponement of the Sam Snead-Ben Hogan 18-hole match until next Wednesday. Similar weather caused a delay in tournament play Sunday.

It was an embarrassing decision for the climate-conscious Junior Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the $15,000 tournament. But it won approval of the two contestants and a handful of spectators, ready to brave a steady downpour.

Neither Snead nor Hogan insisted on the delay. Both merely said they felt they'd play better golf if they waited for a dry day.

Willie Hunter, professional at the Riviera course where the tournament began last Friday, called the course playable.

But in the end, after a half-hour's locked door conference among chamber, Professional Golf Association and club officials, and the two principals, the chamber announced:

"All sides agreed to play, but in the interests of good golf it was decided to call it off."

That left Hogan, back on the tournament trail less than a year after a traffic accident which nearly took his life, and Snead, golf's hottest competitor while Hogan was bedridden, still deadlocked at the 280 strokes with which they finished yesterday's round.

The postponement until next week was decided on to avoid conflict with the Bing Crosby Pro-Amateur Tournament at Peeble Beach, in northern California, starting Friday for three days.

The playoff will come just ahead of the $10,000 Long Beach Open, starting January 19 for five days.

Janiro Upsets Charlie Fusari

Detroit, Jan. 11 (AP). — Tony Janiro, the reformed playboy from Youngstown, Ohio, fought his way back into the top ranks of the welterweight division by soundly whipping the highly regarded Charlie Fusari of Irvington, N. J., in a 10-rounder tonight. Fusari was a 10-3 ringside favorite.

The 151¼-pound Janiro got a split decision as he won going away over the one time New Jersey milkman who weighed 148. Referee Lou Handler called it 54-46 for Janiro and Judge Joe Lenahan made it 52-48. Judge Pete Miller called it 50-50.

A crowd of 12,283 paid a gross gate of $30,425.82 to see the bout.

Virginia, W&L Win In Twin Bill

Lexington, Va., Jan. 11.—University of Virignia whipped V.M.I., 78-55, and Washington and Lee trimmed Bridgewater, 63-54, tonight in a basketball double-header here tonight. A crowd of 2600, largest ever to watch basketball here, was on hand.

Joe Noertker paced the Cavaliers to their easy victory with 21 points. They scored the first eight points, and were never threatened.

Redskin Ace Admits Talks and 'Interest'

Waco, Tex., Jan. 11 (U.P.).—Slingin' Sammy Baugh, veteran passing and punting wizard of the Washington Redskins for more than a decade, appeared tonight to have the inside track on the head coaching job at Baylor—if he wants it and can get away from the Redskins.

Sources close to the Baylor athletic committee said sentiment inside the committee was crystalizing on Baugh as a successor to Flroida-bound Bob Woodruff although Baugh has never coached a day since leaving Texas Christian University.

Baugh told United Press from his ranch home near Rotan that he was "interested" in the Baylor job and admitted he had been contacted by someone from Baylor.

In Washington, Redskin Owner George Marshall laughed at the report and said he "doubted if Sam would leave the Redskins for a coaching job.

"And, if he does any coaching, it probably will be for the Redskins," Marshall said.

Baugh, advised of Marshall's joking reception to the report, said he'd have to take the matter up with the Redskin president if the Baylor situation got "hot enough."

"I can't say anything other than the fact I'm interested," Baugh said, "If it goes any further, I'll have to talk to Marshall before making any statement."

He said he had made no plans to talk to Marshall by telephone or in person and wouldn't until Baylor starts talking "turkey."

It was understood here that the Baylor representatives who had talked to Baugh had been favorably impressed with the tall, tanned Texan and that Baugh would be invited to Waco to confer with the committee, possibly Friday.

Baugh said he had not yet received any such invitation.

The feeling among some members of the committee was that the lure of Baugh's name would bring enough high caliber material to Baylor to help offset his possible inexperience.

Baugh late last year renewed his contract with the Redskins, with whom he has starred consistently since joining the pro team in 1938.

2 School Officials Approached Sam

Sammy Baugh told The Washington Post by phone that two of the group that approached him regarding the Baylor coaching post were school officials.

Baugh affirmed his interest in the job but said he wouldn't do anything before talking to Redskin Owner George Marshall.

Asked if he felt ready to step in as coach, Baugh drawled, "I don't know why I couldn't."

Dr. W. R. White, Baylor president, has been out of town and hadn't talked to members of his athletic committee about Baugh.

From Waco, Tex., Dr. White said, "I hold Mr. Baugh in the highest esteem, but hadn't thought of his being available. I know our school would be delighted to have him."

Erdelatz at Helm

Young Squad Awaits New Navy Coach

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP).—Eddie Erdelatz assumed his first football command today, taking over as skipper of Navy,s buffeted crew.

He'll be in charge for the next four years, according to the contract. Coach George Sauer also had a four-year pact, but he was paid off at the end of two on December 30.

It's the first head coaching job for the 36-year-old Erdelatz. He spent 12 years in the obscure, as far as the public is concerned, jobs of assistant coach at St. Mary's, San Francisco, the Navy, and professional San Francisco 49ers.

It will be a football-young crew greeting Eddie at spring practice in March. The majority of the holdovers were sophomores last year, the fourth straight disastrous season for the Middies. They won only four games during the dismal stretch.

Erdelatz already is familiar personally with one of the Plebes, Quarterback Bob Cameron of Los Angeles. He steered Cameron to the Naval Academy and expects him to push Bob Zastrow for the first-string quarterback job.

Erdelatz hopes to straighten out his assistant coaching staff between now and March. He has said he wants to keep Ben Martin and Ray Swartz, two of Sauer's aids, but he doesn't know yet in what capacities. He will hire two others.

"I can't say anything at this point regarding the assistants," Erdelatz said at his home in San Francisco. "There have been quite a few applicants for jobs."

Erdelatz was the first and only coach interviewed by the Academy after Sauer's abrupt departure. There were reports he had been contacted before the season ended and asked to come to Annapolis to discuss the Navy grid situation.

Leoffler Wants Profits If Publinx Fees Are Raised

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

While the Interior Department toys with the idea of approving fees increases up to 60 percent for public links golfers here, there's sharp difference of opinion as to where the added revenue should go.

S. G. Leoffler, concessionaire since 1921, thinks he has the logical solution—that it should go to him.

Leoffler, who claims he's lost money on his operation for two straight years, said yesterday, "I can't be expected to run the courses indefinitely without profit."

Interior officials recently started considering the rate increases again. They discussed the matter last September, then dropped it.

At that time, the D. C. Recreation Board approved of the increases, provided that any profits derived would be applied against money Leoffler claims is due him.

Yesterday, Chairman Harry S. Wender said he still felt that any increase in fees should have that provision.

Leoffler didn't object to the Recreation proposal last fall but made it clear yesterday that he doesn't care for a similar agreement for this year.

"Why," he explained, "I'd just be working to pay back what's owed me anyway."

The Recreation Board enters into the golf picture because of its "basic agreement" with the Interior Department. It was drawn with the understanding that the courses eventually will be turned over to the Recreation Department.

The action followed a congressional investigation into the long-time Loeffler operation. In the course of it, a GAO auditor

His Lordship Pins An Irishman

Blood and Toil Win Again for British Lion

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Lord Carlton, handled like a side of English mutton most of the way, finally turned British Lion and squeezed enough blood out of Irish Jack Kelly to win last night's featured wrestling affair at Turner's Arena.

Somewhere along the line Kelly zigged when he should have zagged and the result was a deep cut over his left eye. The Atlantan probably figured that this sent the script into discard.

At any rate, he tried to give His Lordship a blood transfusion. However, Carlton wouldn't hold still for it.

With both men taking on a crimson hue, Referee Benny Bortnick called in the track physician who waved Kelly back into action.

Then Carlton, who had been out of the ring so much he stuck up several acquaintances among the close-up customers, became a rogue and made Kelley's wound a target.

It all became so gruesome that even Bortnick couldn't stand the sight so he raised the bloody (somebody else's blood, of course) Englishman's arm in victory.

Kelly was so appreciative that he promptly knocked the referee flat—and he wasn't facing the television if you know what I mean.

Irish Jack made several futile attempts to get his Lordship to play some more. Failing, he turned his blood-smeared puss to the crowd, assuming a hero-in-defeat stance, getting only booes as a reward. By this time, poor Kelly couldn't have found "sympathy" in the dictionary with those bloody eyes.

The official timer, who won the job in a claw machine, said the time was 13 minutes or was it 13 minutes and 71/2 seconds?

Don Newcombe, the Dodgers' pitching sensation, got away with his debut as a referee in good style. He handled himself with dignity, broke a couple of questionable holds and proved adept at sidestepping flying bodies.

In the end he beat the mat three times to signal a victory for Dick Trout over Pat O'Hara. Action lasted 20 minutes.

Trout got O'Hara in a airplane spin and it looked as if Newcombe might become the first ball player to be hit by a pitched bull.

However, Trout managed to throw O'Hara the other way.

Tiny Mills and Natie Brown engaged in everything but wrestling with Ace Freeman and Dutch Schwerget in a team battle which ended in a "no contest" decision and some other guys also worked up perspiration.

Sen. Richeson Drops Bill to Force Game

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—State Senator Frank S. Richeson, of Richmond, said today he will not attempt to legislate the University of Virginia and William and Mary College into a football game.

Earlier, Richeson had announced his intention to offer a bill or resolution to the General Assembly to require all State-supported schools to compete with each other in all sports. Such legislation admittedly would have been aimed at pairing Virginia and William and Mary on the gridiron.

Richeson in a statement issued shortly before the convening of the General Assembly as noon today, said:

"In view of the statement of the Honorable Colgate W. Darden, jr., president of the University of Virginia . . . I see no reason for offering a bill or resolution relative to the athletic relations of the State schools.

"It is very gratifying to me, and I know to thousands of other sports lovers of the State, that President Darden stated that he would favor a football series between Virginia and the College of William and Mary . . ."

Richeson suggested that if a stadium in the State is not large enough for the game, that such a game be played in Washington's Griffith Stadium, which seats 35,000.

Darden said yesterday he favored resumption of football and all sports relations between the two schools.

Blazers Led By Selby's 11 Points

The Tigers had beaten North Virginia champion George Washington, 55-38, and previously undefeated Coolidge, 56-42. The Blazers lost to George Washington, 43-41.

Blair, behind, 6-5, at the end of the first quarter, gained an 11-11 halftime tie when Bill Larrimore sank a set shot from foul circle with 30 seconds remaining.

The Blazers jumped to a 13-11 lead in the opening seconds of the third period on John Selby's one-handed set shot. They never lost the lead after that, and built it up as the game progressed.

The win gives Blair a record of six victories against two setbacks. Wilson's Jim Young led the game's scorers with 12 points. Selby was high for Blair with 11 points.

Bullis Beats Central, 42-35

John Garland and Barry Holt, the later a member of last year's Central team, paced Bullis with 12 and nine points. Jack Stringer had 13 for Central.

Bullis trailed, 11-10, at the end of the first quarter and 19-18, at half. However, Bullis pulled ahead, 31-28, going into the last quarter and stayed ahead.

Leoffler Asks For Profits

claimed that actually Loeffler owed the Government more than $100,000. Loeffler stoutly contends that he's entitled to approximately $250,000 for his interest in the courses.

For nearly five months, the Recreation Board has been waiting for an approved audit for the entire operation.

Latest word is that the GAO received the Interior Department figures more than a week ago and currently is processing them.

Wender admits his group is stymied until it can learn just what Leoffler is owed for construction and equipment. When the figure finally is determined, recreation officials can get down to the other complicated problem of where they can get the amount needed to take over.

Meanwhile Interior actually is in full control. Leoffler's last five-year contract expired December 31, 1948. Since, he's been running the courses under a continuing agreement with the Interior Department.

He estimates his 1949 deficit as approximately $20,000. Leoffler also maintains that he has a commitment with the Interior Department that he can make stick for at least five years.

Magnotto's 25 Paces Chamberlain

Tony Magnotto, high man with 25 points, scored five of them in overtime to lead Chamberlain to a 64-58 victory over DeMatha last night on the winners' court.

'Nothing Definite'

Sauer Confers With Cougars

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—George Sauer, former Navy coach, conferred today with officials of Washington State College in regard to the head coaching post at the West Coast institution.

"I enjoyed the talk but nothing definite was done," Sauer said.

He conferred with Bob Brumblay, athletic director and Dr. T. H. Kennedy, faculty athletic representative.

"We have not made up our minds' Brumblay said. "We are making an extensive search for the best coach possible and are interviewing all eligibles."

Virginia Fights NCAA

Three of these have been investigated by an NCAA probing agency known as the panel and the other seven will be looked into, Houston added.

Their cases will be taken up next year, if subsequent checks prove them still violating the code, he declared.

The sanity code limits athletic scholarships and forbids soliciting of talent or payment of athletes for ability alone.

Houston said the 101 institutions who got the latest questionnaire were, in the main, well-known schools with ranking football teams. He didn't elaborate further.

Has Its Own FBI

The Compliance Committee chief also outlined the machinery now in use for ferreting out violations of the code and for punishing the sinners.

This is the setup he described:

Complaints of violations are sent to the Compliance Committee, a three-man group which is the NCAA's FBI.

The committee has its own investigators—a private detective agency with former FBI men as operatives. These Private Eyes do the probing.

If there is reason of suspicion, the case is passed along to the NCAA panel, headed by James Lynah of Savannah, Ga., which looks into the matter further. The panel is composed of former athletic officials from all parts of the country, about 30 in number.

Institutions out of step are given an opportunity to return to line. If they persist in their infractions, then their case is taken before the NCAA's general membership.

Police Boys Club Enlists Don Newcombe

Dad's a Congressman

Tech Student, 16, Goes Lobbying For Lighted Stadia in D. C. Highs

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE INTERHIGHS have an energetic and youthful lobbyist fighting their battle for lighted stadia in the austere halls of Congress.

He is Phil Gross, 16-year-old McKinley Tech High junior, who knows his way around Capitol Hill. His dad is Congressman H. R. Gross (R., Iowa).

Perturbed over the way the House District Committee has ignored school appeals for more money to improve the athletic program here, Phil went rapping on the doors of the committeemen last week.

He got audiences with Representative Joseph R. O'Hara (R., Minn.) and Representative Henry O. Talle (R., Iowa) and got them to say that if the District asks for money to light a high school stadium in Washington, they would vote in favor of it.

Young Gross was downhearted yesterday to learn that the District Commissioners had failed to even ask for money to light the stadia.

Hardy Pearce, head of the interhigh athletic program, gave the youngster a hearty pat on the back though. "His kind of spirit will get us lights one of these days," said Pearce.

The Board of Education has been considering bids to light Eastern and Central High stadia for night football. The schools contend that night football would increase gate receipts for purchase of better equipment for all the athletes.

Phil said yesterday, "I've seen what night football has done for the kids in my hometown of Waterloo, Iowa. The population there is only 70,000, yet the night games draw better than 6000, and the kids have the best kind of gear.

"I doubt if I'll live in Washington after I graduate from Tech; I'll probably live in Iowa; but still, I'd like to see the Washington kids get a square break. They've been kicked around enough by Congress," said young Gross.

He's not so sure he wants to follow his dad's footsteps into Congress. "I'd like to take a crack at newspaper writing," he says, "covering politics or sports."

He plans to attend the University of Missouri school of journalism.

16-Point Navy Spurt Sinks Johns Hopkins

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 11 (AP).—An 11-minute spurt in the second half gave Navy a 54-40 basketball victory today over Johns Hopkins.

Pulling away from a 36-36 tie seven minutes after the intermission, Navy scored 16 points in the next 11 minutes, at the same time blanking Hopkins.

It was Navy's seventh win in eight starts and seven straight victory in a seven-game series with Hopkins.

Internal Revenue Job Boosts Offset Budgeted Cuts in Other Sections

TREASURY: The President's 1951 budget provides these personnel shifts in this department:

The Secretary's office would decline from 391 to 384 employes; the Bureau of Public Debt would go down from 6087 to 5787 workers; the Treasurer's office from 1533 to 1476; the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from 6171 to 5843; the Mint from 1103 to 986, and the Bureau of Accounts, from 240 to 239.

These decreases would be more than offset by a big boost in the "average" staff of the Internal Revenue Bureau from 53,598 to 57,965. Funds are provided in the budget for 2750 new full-time employes in Revenue's enforcement division.

In addition, the Customs Bureau would be increased from 8094 to 8203 employes; the Narcotics Bureau, from 284 to 296; the Coast Guard, from 4191 to 4276, and the Secret Service, from 353 to 395.

LABOR: This is how this department would be affected by the President's budget:

The Solicitor's Office would be expanded from 287 to 387 employes; the Secretary's office, 284 to 295 persons; Bureau of Labor Standards, 117 to 131; Bureau of Apprenticeship, 478 to 484; Women's Bureau, 65 to 72; and the Wage and Hour Division, 1383 to 1131. The latter division would be expanded to enforce the higher minimum wage law.

There would be no change in the 43-man staff of the Veterans Reemployment Rights Division. The Bureau of Employment Security would decline slightly, from 888 to 835 jobs. The Bureau of Labor Statistics would go up from 1166 to 1213, and the staff of its special price index survey would be boosted from 275 to 552.

STATE: Assistant State Secretary Edward G. Miller, jr. has made these three new appointments in the Bureau of Inter-American Affairs: Forney A. Rankin, public affairs adviser; Ivan V. White, economic and labor adviser, and Ernest W. Spaulding, intelligence adviser. In addition, Miller announced a reshuffle making Thomas Mann director of the office of the Middle American Affairs, Howard W. Tewksbury director of the office of East Coast Affairs, John C. Dreier director of the office of Regional American Affairs, and Louis J. Halle, jr., special administrator for technical cooperation in the hemisphere.

VETS CREDIT: Representative Miller (D., Calif.) is sponsoring a bill to give all veterans in Government credit toward in-grade promotions for the time they served in the armed forces. His bill would apply to veterans who entered Government after military service. Veterans who returned to their Federal jobs already have been given promotion credit. Both the Senate and House Postoffice and Civil Service committees have approved veterans' promotion credit bills for postal employes.

Dale E. Doty has been appointed assistant to Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman. He is an excellent choice . . . Emory Burgess has been promoted to assistant in Agriculture's Entomology and Plant Quarantine . . . O. Glenn Stahl, personnel officer of the Federal Security Agency, and James D. Teller of the Defense Department, have been added to the public affairs faculty of American University . . . Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) has in a bill to do something that should have been done long ago—make the basic salaries of Capitol Hill employes their actual salaries. The salary system is both complicated and deceptive.

POSTAL EMPLOYES: The Postmaster General has cleared up some of the misunderstanding over his recent order on the duties of low-paid mail handlers. He says the handlers are to do simple duties that do not require scheme studies and do not place individual financial responsiblties on them. They also will distribute parcel post. Postal unions requested the clarifying statement.

Holober Still Has Impulse To Murder, Doctor Says

Wouldn't Trust Him, Mental Expert on Criminally Insane Testifies at Trial

Charles Francis Holober, the grinning slayer of his wife and infant daughter, still has the "irresistible impulse" to kill, a District psychiatrist told a nearby Virginia court yesterday.

"He'd do it over again. I wouldn't trust him," Dr. Benjamin Karpman, authority on the criminally insane, testified at the murder trial of Holober in Fairfax County Circuit Court.

Karpman, chief phychotherapist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, was the last of three mental experts called by Defense Attorney T. Brooke Howard to testify they believe Holober is insane.

Both sides rested late yesterday and the case will go to the all-male jury after final arguments this morning.

Then it will be up to the jurors to balance the expert medical testimony introduced by both sides and decide:

Was the 41-year-old "problem child" insane one year ago when, at the bleak site of a nudist camp, he killed his wife, Frances, and buried his 8-month-old daughter alive with her mother? And is he insane now?

Although Holober was indicted for both slayings, he is being tried only for the murder of his wife.

Howard has said that in his closing statement he will ask the jury to commit Holober for life to a State institution for the criminally insane.

And the prosecutor, Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh, has said he will ask for the death penalty.

The defense had called one medical witness Tuesday and yesterday added the testimony of Dr. Karpman and Dr. Frank S. Caprio, a private practicing psychiatrist, of 1835 I st. nw.

To support its claim that Holober was sane at the time of the crime and is sane now, the prosecution called Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va.; Dr. Frank S. Chance, who recently resigned as staff psychiatrist at the same hospital, and Dr. Grenville L. Jones, superintendent of Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg, Va.

Dr Karpman, who estimated he has examined more than 5000 criminally insane during his 30-year career, said Holober was insane at the time of the crime and is now.

He said he diagnosed Holober's illness as paranoid schizophrenia, otherwise known as dementia praecox, paranoiac type, after eight interviews with the slayer.

"This man," testified Dr. Karpman, "acted under an irresistible impulse. I personally believe he is beyond treatment, for I have not yet come across a case of schizophrenia that returned to its normal mind.

Dr. Caprio agreed with Dr. Karpman and said in Holober's case "something was bound to happen."

When the wife insisted on moving into the Holober family home, Dr. Caprio said, "it did something to him." He said it was like "putting more and more ammunition in a bomb—it was bound to explode."

Dr. Chance, who studied Holober closely at Southwestern State Hospital while he was there for examination from March to October, 1949, said:

"I felt he was in the realm of sanity but very close to the line. He met the qualifications of sanity. And I think he was sane, too, at the time of the crime. I think he realized all along what he was doing but I don't think he realized its enormity."

Dr. Blalock disagreed with Dr. Karpman's finding—that Holober has a split, or dual, personality with delusions of a homicidal nature—and said that while Holober was not mentally normal and had a split personality, he was not necessarily insane.

Dr. Blalock said Holober had been officially diagnosed as "a psychopath with definite 'schizoid features' but "we reached the conclusion that he was sane. It is my opinion that he was sane at the time of the crime and sane the last time I saw him."

Dr. Jones said he found Holober to be sane.

A Look Inside the Fabulous Townsend House . . .

New Cosmos Club Home Recalls Its Past Glory

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A 1945 telephone book, a can of roach powder, a kitchen clock stopped at 1:26.

These are some of the physical remnants of the life of Townsend House, 2121 Massachusetts ave. nw., as the mansion faces a change of its identity to club house for the Cosmos Club.

The 40-odd room house, described as "probably the finest mansion in the city which is still in private possession," will stand idle for a time until Cosmos Club completes its renovation.

Right now, it is filled only with the evidence of its varied existence—first as a town house, later as a temporary residence for President-elect and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933, and still later, during the war, as a billet for Canadian WACs.

It is probably to the latter time that the topographic map of Formosa, hung on a first floor wall, relates. It is unquestionably to its earliest life that the huge Victorian mantels and murals belong.

The huge double front doors of the mansion, with their ornate iron grill work, stand rusted and uninviting in the afternoon sun. And at first the house seems cold, silent. But each footstep starts a crescendo of echoes, and the human voice sounds as though it comes from a tunnel.

There is a massive kitchen, with its stove of eight coal burners, a broiler, and two fireless cookers. There is, over it, the second floor serving pantry, and above that, a balustraded balcony around which the house china was set on shelves.

There is the master bedroom, with raised dais for a bed at one end, to get the morning sun.

There are beamed ceilings inset with leather. There is a marble-floored conservatory facing to the north of the house.

There are the bathrooms, with huge marble lavatories set on tiny legs, and bath tubs of no certain date, and commodes of the pull-chain variety.

There is a winding staircase, red carpeting still intact for our floor which goes to the top of the four story house.

Representatives of the trustees of the late Mrs. Sumner Welles' estate, of which Townsend House is a part, think also the house has its share of ghosts. These representatives have shown the house to prospective buyers, and been in it alone. It is when you are alone, they say, that the ghosts walk—behind you, close.

Plan Studied In Takoma to Enlarge City

The Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce last night referred to its board of directors a suggested three-point program for development of the city.

Under the program proposed by the chamber's standing committee on commercial, business and civic deevlopment, the city would:

Enlarge its corporate limits to include all suburbs.

Cooperate with the District, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and State Roads Commission to provide a larger and safer underpasses in the Takoma Park area, and widen Laurel and Carroll aves. into four-lane roads with parking facilities on either side.

Establish off-street parking areas.

William E. Van Zile, committee chairman, said officials of the General Conference of the Seventh Day Adventist Church have expressed willingness to sell land on Carroll st. and Carroll ave. for conversion into parking space.

Blair Lee 3d, vice chairman of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, indorsed the suggestion of off-street parking.

He also noted that in some 606 cases one-family homes in residential areas have been converted, contrary to zoning regulations, into multi-family dwellings. A possible solution, he said, might be to allow such conversion if the outside appearance of the dwelling remains unchanged.

Mayor John C. Post objected to this suggestion. He said it would deteriorate residential neighborhoods and enable owners of such homes to escape taxes levied on apartment house operators and dwellings in commercial zones.

McNayr Urges Parking Plan for Wheaton Area

Irving McNayr, Montgomery County manager, at a meeting of the Wheaton Chamber of Commerce last night, urged Wheaton businessmen to adopt an offstreet parking plan.

"I would like to see the Wheaton Triangle developed as the center of the commercial area," said McNayr, guest speaker at the meeting in Glenmount School.

The county manager said that to the best of his knowledge the Silver Spring offstreet plan was a model, and recommended that the merchants of the Wheaton area adopt a similar project. The Silver Spring plan involved floating of an $800,000 bond issue by business and industrial interests in 1945, and purchase of nine parking lots.

McNayr estimated that, with the parking improvement, Wheaton's commercial area would have an assessed worth of $1,200,000, instead of the present $970,000 valuation.

The county manager said Wheaton land owners and merchants should organize immediately while land is available at a reasonable price.

"Any delay probably would make an offstreet project impractical," McNayr said.

Bastian's Survey to Provide Sesqui Clean Bill of Health

The Sesquicentennial Commission will get a clean bill of health from Walter Bastian, attorney, who has been conducting a volunteered review of its activities and commitments.

Bastian said yesterday he had found "absolutely nothing that would reflect on any person connected with the sesqui." His report will be presented to the sesqui's executive committee at its Friday meeting. Bastian's services were given the committee without charge.

The attorney said he is recommending publication of all commitments, including a contract with the National Capital Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau, Inc., which has been under fire because of the activities of Paul Alexander, one of the stockholders.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, executive committee chairman, said yesterday he expects his group will order release of information about the various commitments, most of it in the form of letters of intent.

McGarraghy indicated that Bastian's assumed approval of the leasing bureau would make it possible for the executive committee to order a go-ahead on leasing space for the fair to industrial exhibitors. All work has been at a standstill since December 30.

The idea of naming a general manager to take over day-to-day operational control of the Freedom Fair is being considered, McGarraghy said, but so far no conclusion has been reached. At present Edward Boykin, sesqui director, is running the fair and all other sesqui events.

10-O'Clock Traffic Scholar Gets Dunce Mark: 100 Days or $165

A 10-o'clock scholar stood before Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday at 10 a. m. and heard himself sentenced to $165 or 100 days on four traffic charges despite two days of study at the District traffic school.

The "scholar," Robert M. Bobo, 21, a truck driver of 1214 3d st. sw., had been given a break by Neilson December 7 when he was arraigned on a charge of driving without a permit.

Neilson deferred sentencing when Bobo promised to attend traffic school. He attended two sessions and on January 7 the case was again continued to allow further study.

Bobo never returned to school but he did get picked up again Tuesday on charges of driving without a permit, dead tags and improper lights.

Haled before Neilson yesterday, Bobo was sentenced to $50 or 30 days on the original traffic charge; $100 or 60 days on the later no-permit charge; $5 or 5 days for improper lights and $10 or 5 days on the dead tags charge.

"Mighty poor student," Neilson commented as Bobo was led away.

Cocaine in Milk Killed Hacker, Coroner Reports

How Drug Got There Baffles Detectives Was Death Accident, Suicide or Murder?

Milk loaded with cocaine hydrochloride caused the strange death of Joseph E. Randle, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald disclosed yesterday.

Still unanswered was whether the death of the 33-year-old cab driver was an accident, suicide or murder.

He lived at 328 34th st. ne.

Dr. MacDonald said it was the first such death in District annals.

Cocaine hydrochloride is obtainable only by physicians and is used legally for local anesthetics, Dr. MacDonald observed. He added:

"Drug addicts like it, usually sniff it, but one case years ago took it with gin.

"It's also used to jazz up race horses, but there are more effective techniques."

Dr. MacDonald said three tenths of a grain per ounce of the drug was found in one of three 2-quart bottles of milk which Randle himself had bought Monday, November 16. He drank some milk that day, died two days later.

Since 1 to 1½ grains would probably be fatal, about half the ordinary 8-ounce tumbler of milk from the poisoned bottle would have been a lethal dose, Dr. McDonald stated.

Federal narcotics agents and homicide detectives have been unable to date to determine the source of the drug in the milk—and how it got there, Dr. MacDonald said.

Police said Randle and his wife apparently had been very fond of each other. She drank from the same milk bottle, she said, but it did not impair her health.

Their fox terrier became sick twice in recent months and a veterinarian said he suspected it had been poisoned. Randle had the dog put to death in a gas chamber because he said he couldn't afford the expenses of medical care for it, police said.

In 'Dope' Case
Bribe Bid Charged to Defendant

Roberts — Mrs. Roberts
Dope trial defendants

James Roberts, described as "one of the big fish" in Washington's narcotics traffic, offered a local hotel detective $500 to permit him inside "to get some good imported stuff," the Government charged in District Court yesterday.

Assistant United States Attorney Arthur McLaughlin made the allegation in his opening statement to the jury in the trial of Roberts and his pretty red-haired wife, Mrs. Evelina L. Roberts, 23, both charged with several counts of narcotics violations.

Before Judge E. Dickinson Letts adjourned the court until 10 a. m. today, McLaughlin gave the jury a few dramatic highlights of how a Bureau of Narcotics agent and a former "acquaintance" of Roberts drove to the latter's apartment at 744 Girard st. nw. in a high-powered automobile last October 7.

Agent With Them

The Federal agent was Howard Chappell and the former friend, was James Watson, both of whom will be Government witnesses.

Roberts' apartment was one of the 14 places raided here last October 18 when Metropolitan police and Federal authorities arrested 31 persons on narcotics charges.

McLaughlin gave this account of the October 7 meeting: Watson knocked on Roberts' door, and after cordial greetings, said he had "a white boy traveling with me" and could he bring him up to the apartment. Roberts consented, according to McLaughlin.

'Get Away From Dunbar'

"Then Roberts asked Watson where he was staying," McLaughlin said. When Watson replied that he was putting up at the Dunbar Hotel, McLaughlin quoted Roberts as saying:

"You better get out of there. I was there about a week ago because one of my boys had some good imported stuff down there. I went there . . . and had a little trouble. I offered a dumb house detective $500 to go inside to get it. But the dumb guy called the police and they came and got it."

A jury of five women and seven men were sworn in after defense attorneys Joseph and Josiah Lyman closely questioned each prospective juror on their possible associations with any principals in the case and whether past newspaper publicity had in any way prejudiced their outlook on the case.

One juror, Keith Williams, 43, a radio engineer of 1123 Kalmia rd. nw, was relieved of jury duty when he said he would be prejudiced "because of the relationship between the two defendants."

High on List

At Roberts' arraignment last October 28, Assistant United States Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder said Roberts "has been on the primary list of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics for more than 10 years, and that he ranks fairly high as being Public Enemy No. 1 on the narcotics list." At that time, Reifsnyder also quoted Roberts as bragging he "had the police department in his pocket."

The prosecutor then said Roberts was sentenced May 11, 1945, to serve two terms of one to three years concurrently as result of convictions in New York and Washington.

6 Capitol Cab Ex-Officers Under Arrest

Six former officers of the Capitol Cab Co., an organization of 370 owner drivers, were arrested yesterday on embezzlement charges and released in $500 bond each for appearance in Municipal Court today.

The warrants were sworn to by Herbert A. Rollins, 24 Defrees st. nw., now president of the organization, who was elected at a membership meeting on January 3.

Proctor E. Butler, 46, of 644 Kenyon st. nw., former vice president.

Claude T. Porter, 43, of 4252 Q st. nw., former secretary.

Louis P. Sousa, 50, of 509 2d st. nw., former treasurer.

Arthur Tardy, 39 of 5109 Jay st. ne., former trustee.

All were charged with larceny of amounts varying from $50 to $350 in connection with checks of the concern issued and paid.

Rollins said last night that constitution and bylaws of the firm required regular monthly meetings and annual elections. He said the meetings were skipped for some time, and elections were not held for three years.

RFC Officer Fined In Traffic Case

Gerald B. Hadlock, executive director of the Office of Rubber Reserve of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was fined $100 yesterday by Judge Hugh Reid in Arlington County Court, for reckless driving on December 23.

Police Pvts. John W. Wise and J. D. Yowell testified his car was "weaving" and passed through a red light.

Hadlock said he was physically exhausted from recent business and from hunting trips. He lives at 1805 N. Rhodes st., Arlington.

Egg Container Hits Pie Company Employe

James A. Fisher, 30, of 1671 Rosedale st. ne., an employe of the Crusty Pie Co., 30 O st. ne., was taken to Casualty Hospital yesterday after a five-gallon container of frozen eggs fell from a shelf on his head.

He was reported recovering from head contusions and possible concussion. His condition was fair.

Woman Suffocated by Fumes From Smoke in Fiery Bed

Mrs. Mary A. Parker, 57, 1611 Webster st. ne., died last night, apparently of smoke suffocation, when fire broke out in a second floor bedroom in her home.

Detective Sergt. Walter N. Cook of the homicide squad said the fire apparently started in a spread on her bed. Mrs. Parker, he said, apparently discovered the blaze and took the spread to a bathroom where she doused it with water

But the fire had reached the mattress, Cook said, and the upstairs was filled with smoke.

Mrs. Parker's daughter, Mrs. Lillian W. Crippen, 40, with whom she lives, was returning from work and discovered smoke coming from the home. She summoned firemen and then attempted to reach her mother on the second floor but was unable to do so because of the smoke, Cook said.

When firemen arrived, Pvt. Melvin F. Bullman of Engine Company 17 went to the second floor and carried Mrs. Parker downstairs. Firemen said he was nearly overcome in the effort. Bullman said he found her collapsed over a bed in another room.

D. C. Argues Right Of Health Search

The District of Columbia argued before the Supreme Court yesterday that the constitutional protection against unreasonable search of a man's home does not apply to inspection of it for insanitary conditions dangerous to public health.

Chester H. Gray, assistant corporation counsel, presented the city's case in an effort to overturn lower court rulings against the District in the Geraldine Little case. Mrs. Little refused to permit a health inspector to enter her home without a warrant, despite complaints about accumulated refuse.

Gray argued that the purpose of the health inspections was not so much to punish the occupant of an insanitary house as to "abate the nuisance" involved—clean up the mess, in other words. He admitted, on questioning by the justices, that householders who refused to comply with a notice to clean things up could be subjected, and sometimes have been, to criminal penalties.

However, he said, such a householder could not be arrested at the time of inspection, but only after a complaint had been issued by the Health Department as a result of the findings.

Mrs. Little was convicted and fined $25 for forcibly keeping the health inspector out of her home at 1315 10th st. nw. in the fall of 1947.

Question of Warrant

Justice Reed wanted to know what would be the difficulty in obtaining a warrant before making the inspection if the householder objected. Gray replied that "there is no such thing as an inspection warrant" and that the Health Department doesn't have the facts necessary to obtain an affidavit for a regular search warrant until after the inspector has had a chance to see the house.

The Constitution's fourth amendment says a person's house shall be protected against "unreasonable searches and seizures" and that no search warrant shall be issued except "on probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized."

When argument in the case is resumed today, the court will hear Anne X. Alpern, city solicitor of Pittsburgh, who is appearing for the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers on the District's side of the case.

Her brief declares there are administrative obstacles to "operating inspection systems through warrants." Warrants could be obtained, she contends, only where the offenses were so bad that neighbors would be willing to sign complaints, or health officers could smell or see the offending garbage. But public health programs are based on the theory of preventing such extreme conditions, not curing them, she adds.

Attorney Jeff Busby will argue Mrs. Little's side of the case, following Miss Alpern.

Postlude

Tremendous Evening at Symphony

By Paul Hume

So much happened last night at the National Symphony concert in Constitution Hall that we should have several columns to tell it all.

Howard Mitchell conducted, with Hugo Weisgall as guest composer-conductor in his own music. Isaac Stern was violin soloist in a Mozart concerto and Ravel's Tzigane.

The opening work was a Bach transcription by Ralph Berkowitz, who was present to receive the congratulations of the large audience.

Berkowitz arranged a Toccata and Fugue in C Minor, originally for keyboard instrument. He is to be complimented on the general taste of his arrangement. The tricky problem of how to handle horns, trombones and balance did not trouble him.

The music sounded well, and was especially well phrased and enunciated by the orchestra.

Isaac Stern is a violinist of great line. His subtle elegance in Mozart was no less persuasive than his big, fiery style in Ravel's gypsy improvisation. He handled the ineffable slow movement of Mozart's poetic concerto as if it could not possibly be played beautifully enough. He need not worry about his achievement.

The Ravel went with tremendous sweep from both soloist and orchestra. Mitchell was in particularly good form for Ravel. His account of the Rapsodie Espagnol was rhythmically electric. The orchestra's assumption of dark colors was superb.

Weisgall's suite was taken from a legend for ballet called Outpost. It consists of four dances descriptive of a young lady named Isabella, who was unfaithful to someone named Richard.

The music is uneven, with few moments to praise.

The composer was loudly hailed at the close of his music. The orchestra played it with passable conviction, but such music needs more rehearsal than it is worth. Mitchell closed with a tremendous account of Tschaikowsky's Romeo and Juliet.

Next week: Agi Jambor in Bach's D Minor Concerto, with Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony.

Gen. D. G. Richart

Denver, Jan. 11 (AP).—Brig. Gen. D. G. Richart, 62 of Savannah Beach, Ga., died today at Fitzsimons General Hospital where he had been under treatment since November 30 for pneumonia.

A graduate of West Point in 1910, General Richart had had wide Army experience both in the United States and overseas. During the early war years he was commanding officer at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and later at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.

He was retired from active duty in 1943 because of physical disability.

Recreation Head to Discuss Bonding for Money Handlers

Bonding of all Recreation Department employes who handle public money will be discussed by Superintendent Milo Christiansen at a staff meeting today.

The step was proposed at a meeting of the District Recreation Board at which the board, in another move, offered the Board of Education the use of the New York Avenue Playground during school hours for Negro students of Dunbar High School and Terrell Junior High School.

Some 168 recreation workers would be affected by the bonding plan, which Christiansen views as "protection for all." Because of a Federal regulation, bonding would be at the employes' own expense, and cost from $1 to $6 per year. Only Christiansen and Mrs. Anne McCluskey, fiscal clerk, are bonded now.

The offer of the New York Avenue Playground for Negro students specifies its use up to 1 p. m. From 1 to 3 p. m. the playground is used by preschool white children, after which it is open to older white children.

The board, however, authorized Christiansen to extend at his discretion use of the ground by the Board of Education to 3 p. m. if desired and practical.

Terrell has no playground, and that at Dunbar is not available for general use because it must be kept in condition for the athletic contests of the Negro high schools.

The recreation board also voted to set up a special committee to study the advisability of making the Park View Playground available to both races, upon the recommendation of Chairman Harry S. Wender.

Since Park View Elementary School, across the street from the playground, was assigned to use of Negro students last year, the playground has also been designated for Negro use.

Wender said it was a good opportunity to show critics the board did not have to wait for pressure to make changes in accordance with the revision of board rules last summer. At that time the rules were amended to provide for a change to biracial playgrounds as soon as possible.

In another action the recreation board offered transfer of a Class A liquor license from 1003 Connecticut ave. to 1529 17th st. nw., a location only 100 feet from property owned by the board. The board hopes to open the proposed Mary Force Stead playground on its site in the next year or two.

North Washington

The North Washington Council of Citizens Associations last night unanimously approved the proposed abolition of the ban on all-night parking.

Fare Raise Protested By Citizens

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association last night went on record as being opposed to a proposed increase in transit fares and discontinuance of the weekly pass.

In another action, the association at its meeting at 2004 Rhode Island ave. ne., reelected Chester B. Duncan president. Also reelected were:

Lulyn M. Green, first vice president; Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, second vice president; T. S. Mallon jr., treasurer, Mrs. Charles J. Bowne, assistant secretary; Fred T. Devine, financial secretary; the Rev. Kenneth C. Becker and Chester F. Bletch, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Roger N. Crane was chosen secretary to succeed Wallace E. Perry, who retired after 14 years in office.

Woodside Asks Zoning

The Woodside Park Civic Association last night went on record urging the Montgomery County Council to allow new zoning for apartment-house use only when there is a clear demonstration of the need.

A resolution was adopted which said that "the need of county residents and workers and the application of sound zoning and planning principles" should be the yardstick used.

In other action, the group requested the city council to rehear, reconsider and vacate the order granting recent commercial zoning to the Poston property on Ellsworth st. near Fenton st. The meeting took place at the Grace Church Parish Hall, 9301 Georgia ave., Silver Spring.

Dr. Cort, 70, Dies; Medical Missionary

Dr. Edwin C. Cort, 70, the father of modern medicine in Siam, died in an Alexandria Hospital Tuesday night from coronary thrombosis.

The man who first took Western medicine to the remote corners of Siam by horseback and remained to direct a chain of eight hospitals, including a leprosarium, suffered a heart attack on New Year's Eve.

Dr. Cort returned to this country last June to retire after 40 years in the Far East and became a civilian medical officer at Fort Belvoir Hospital. He and his wife, the former Mabel Gilson of Canton, Ohio, lived at 302 S. St. Asaph st., Alexandria.

The famed missionary brought back two honors—the Order of the White Elephant, third class, the highest honor ever given a foreigner not in the diplomatic service, and credit for a vastly lowered malaria rate in the then Thailand.

A native of Pittsburgh, Dr. Cort was sent to Siam by the Presbyterian Church in 1908 after graduating from Washington and Jefferson College, and from the Johns Hopkins Medical School in Baltimore.

Except for an interlude during the war, he spen talmost 40 years in Siam.

Dr. Cort, his wife and 26 of his hospital staff, escaped across the Siamese-Burmese border eight hours after the Japs had officially closed it in 1941 "because the customs guards were former patients." He spent two and one-half years running a hospital in India during the war, returned to the United States briefly and then sailed again for Siam in January of 1946.

His group carried six tons of medical and relief supplies donated by the Church World Service, an organization of Protestant churches for world relief. He rallied a medical staff that treated 35,000 in a cholera epidemic.

Survivors include his wife, a sister, Mrs. S. A. Shreiner of Pittsburgh, and two brothers, John S. Cort, Pittsburgh attorney, and Stewart J. Cort, a vice president of Bethleham Steel Company.

Capt. Hamilton Glover

Baldwin, N. Y., Jan. 11 (AP).—Capt. Hamilton F. Glover, 67-year-old retired naval officer, died today.

He was in charge of the United States Naval Ordnance plant here until his retirement in June, 1945.

Walter Knott Dies; Ran 'Hill' Elevator

Walter B. Knott, about 68, who was known to a number of Congressmen for the courtesy he displayed in his job as an elevator operator in the Senate Office Building, died Tuesday at his home, 727 Sixth st. se.

Mr. Knott was found dead by Victor Edler of the Senate custodian's office after he had failed to report for work as usual at 7:30 a. m.

A native of Washington, Mr. Knott was a bachelor and lived alone. He had been employed at the Senate Office Building since 1942, and prior to that operated a gasoline station.

His father, the late William Ellsworth Knott, was a blacksmith in Georgetown and later became an electrical engineer. A brother, William, also an elevator operator at the Senate Building, was found dead under similar circumstances at home about two years ago.

Mr. Knott was well known as a supporter of General MacArthur for President, and associates said he wore his MacArthur button until a few months ago.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2:30 p. m. at the Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Clifford D. Ham

Col. Rehkopf, Army Training Expert, Dies

Col. Ned B. Rehkopf, USA (ret.), 72, assistant commandant at the Army War College when he retired in 1941, died yesterday at his home in Franklin Park, Falls Church, Va.

He had been ill for five years.

Colonel Rehkopf was considered an authority on training and military instruction. He served four years each as an instructor at West Point, the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

A 1902 graduate of West Point, he also instructed the National Guard, the School of Fire at Fort Sill, Okla., and officers' training camps in this country and in France prior to and during World War I.

He served on the staff of the Third Corps Area in Baltimore, commanded Fort Hoyle in Aberdeen, Md., and then Fort Ethan Allen in Vermont before being appointed assistant commandant at the War College in 1937.

Colonel Rehkopf, a native of Iowa, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ellen D. Rehkopf; four sons, the Rev. Edward B. Rehkopf, S.J., in Wales, Great Britain; James E. Rehkopf, New Orleans; Maj. G. D. Rehkopf, Arlington, and Bernard F. Rehkopf, Alexandria; three daughters, Mrs. I. R. Engerman, Falls Church; Mrs. J. G. Anding, London, and Miss Ellen D. Rehkopf, Washington; a sister, Mrs. L. D. Carpenter, Indianola, Iowa, and 12 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be Friday at 9 a. m. in Fort Myer. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Only Son, 38, College Teacher, Wants to Wed Quaintly Illiterate Foreign-Born Divorcee, Seven Years His Senior; His Family Protests

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 38, an instructor at a local university, and I come of a cultured American family. I am an only son, devoted to my parents. I would like your comment on the following situation, which is very disturbing to my family and to me.

About four months ago I met a woman seven years my senior, a divorcee with three small children, with whom I fell deeply in love. She is foreign born and although completely charming and goodhearted, she is most uncultured and completely uneducated by my family's standards. Her use of English is really funny; I wouldn't dream of correcting it, but my family is quite ashamed of her mistakes and her general ignorance.

We have certain character traits in common which each appreciates in the other, a very strong physical attraction and a keen sense of humor. I am afraid we have no other common ground, yet we try to adjust each to the other's interests in life. Incidentally, we don't have religion in common, and church is very important to my family.

Woman Adores Her Children

ELSA COMES from the South and I have believed everything she has told me, and never have felt I should check, but my family feels otherwise. She is quite irresponsible and has, I am afraid, not too much stability. She thinks nothing of leaving jobs which displease her, but she is a good mother and adores her children.

We want to marry, and needless to say my family is heartbroken and up in arms (by turns), especially as they've expected me for some years to become engaged to a very charming girl with whom I've been friendly, but for whom I feel no love.

If I marry the woman of my choice I can expect great disapproval from everyone; and it may not work out, due to our many differences. I shall be glad to know how a completely unprejudiced person would feel. R. S.

Isn't He Toying With Day Dream?

DEAR R. S.: To tell the truth, aren't you just toying with the idea of marrying Elsa, as a sort of flight from reality?—having a wonderful day dream that you're trying to string out as long as possible in the guise of "could be?"—and at the same time taking subtle revenge upon your family for tying you to their apronstrings, by throwing a fearful scare into them about your final intentions as regards Elsa? I think you are getting more pleasure and satisfaction on this third point than you realize.

The contrast you draw between Elsa's educational equipment and your own, also the total difference in religious bias, native traditions, social culture, character traits, etc.,—which leaves you only a strong sense of sexual affinity in common—suggests that she is preposterously ill suited to be your wife, taking into account your pusillanimous temperament and your occupation in an environment where conformity is the price of admission.

I think she would be a fish out of water in your milieu; and that if you were to marry her, charmed by her "difference" at this time, sooner or later you would expect her to be all things to you, in terms of your tribal mores and mom-conditioning. You're not the type of person whose stature is big enough to absolve the mate from striving for "acceptance" from class-conscious associates. On the contrary, you would look to her to make smooth your way, and that she's not prepared to do, in the circles in which you move.

Bondage to Mom The Real Problem

SPEAKING of mom-conditioning, I take it your life is ruled by your mother, and that an excessively strong filial attachment has kept you a bachelor until now. And this impression leads me to think your extraordinary yen for Elsa, an older woman with three children, is really a temporary transference of frustrated mom-worship from your blood mother to a romantic substitute,—which suggests that you would be involving Elsa in still another problem beyond her depths, if you were to marry her with your mom-fixation undissolved.

Thus I feel the commotion simmers down to a problem in family relations; and that your first necessity is to effect release from psychological bondage to parents—on the infantile level of unconscious dependency that exists at present. Emotionally the umbilical cord is not yet severed; and until that is done, and a manly degree of emancipated growth achieved, it seems unwise to take a wife from "the alien corn." M. H.

40th Anniversary

A dinner dance was given Sunday, January 8, at Indian Spring Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Furr and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Miller, honoring their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Miller, on the occasion of their fortieth wedding anniversary. More than 300 guests attended.

Music was furnished by the Mayer Ratner orchestra. Cocktails were served at 5:30 and dinner at 7:30 p. m.

Visit New Grandson Here

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Steiner of St. Louis, are in Washington for a visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Dreyfuss, and to see their new grandson.

Tiny Town, Jan. 12th

A working mother, familiar with mother's money worries, has found a solution to the problem. Leslie Sealfon's mom, Micki Sealfon, has opened her own store, Tiny Town, at 806 17th St. N.W. "I found a place 7 steps above street level — several dollars lower in overhead. Example: Hand-made dress for sister or suit for brother at $2.95." Extras to you—lower prices—personalized and experienced assistance—gay wrapping. She invites other mothers to "Come and Browse." (Free gift awaits your tot.)

Here's the Recipe That Won $50,000

HERE'S the recipe that won a $50,000 national prize! It's for Water Rising Twists, pictured above, and came out tops in a giant "bake-off" recently at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

As traditional as the old oaken bucket, the "no-knead" twists are easy to make, says Ellen Pennell, home service director for Pillsbury, sponsors of the contest. They can serve as sweet tender breakfast rolls, or in a smaller twist are ideal for soup-and-salad lunch. Covered with a crystalline glaze of sugar, cinnamon, and nuts, and twisted into any of a variety of shapes. They go like hot cakes with coffee or tea.

NO-KNEAD WATER-RISING TWISTS

(Mrs. Ralph E. Smafield, Detroit Mich.)

½ cup shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup scalded milk
2 cakes compressed yeast, crumbled (or 2 packages dry granular yeast dissolved in ¼ cup lukewarm water)
3 cups sifted flour
3 eggs
¾ cup chopped nuts (any kind)
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Combine shortening, sugar, salt, vanilla, and milk. (If dry yeast is used, decrease milk to ¼ cup). Add yeast and mix well. Blend in 1½ cups flour and beat until smooth. Cover and let rest for 15 minutes. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in remaining flour and mix thoroughly. (The dough will be quite soft). Let rise in one of two ways: (1) Either set covered dough in warm place (80 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit) about ½ hour; or (2) tie dough in a tea towel, allowing ample space for dough to rise. Then place in large mixing bowl and fill with water (75 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit). Let stand until dough rises to top of water, about 30 to 45 minutes. Remove from water.

Combine nuts, sugar and cinnamon. Divide dough into small pieces with a tablespoon. Roll each piece in sugar-nut mixture. Stretch to about 8-inch length. Twist into desired shapes. Place on greased baking sheet. Let stand for 5 minutes. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) for 12 to 15 minutes. Makes two dozen twists.

Good Start for Company

If you are expecting company for supper, give them this as a starter. Mix one can of condensed tomato soup, with 1½ cups each of cream-style corn and milk; heat and season with celery salt.

Round of Parties for 'Veep' and Bride Begins

By Marie Mc Nair and Elizabeth Maguire

VICE PRESIDENT AND MRS. BARKLEY were honor guests at a dinner last evening given by Mr. Barkley's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, who entertained at the 1925 F Street Club.

Vice President and Mrs. Barkley will be honor guests at a dinner on Friday, February 3 at which Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz will be hosts.

Farewell Party For Air Chief

Another farewell party for Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Medhurst and Lady Medhurst was given yesterday afternoon by Sir Alwyn and Lady Crow in their apartment at the Shoreham. Sir Charles and Lady Medhurst will sail January 20 on the Franconia for England.

Among those who stopped in to say goodby were the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Stuart Symington, the British Minister Sir Derick Hoyer and Lady Millar; the British Minister and Mrs. J. W. Taylor, Brig. Charles Lindemann, the British Embassy Military Attache and Mrs. J. C. Windsor Lewis; the British Embassy Naval Attache and Mrs. J. Holmes, the British Embassy Air Attache and Mrs. R. C. Jonas, Gen. and Mrs. S. N. Shoesmith, Rear Admiral and Mrs. B. B. Schofield, the Hon. Edward Russell and Mrs. Russell and Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton, Lady Dalrymple Hamilton.

Others were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. M. Gruenther, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Walsh, Air Vice Marshal H. L. Campbell of Canada and Mrs. Marshall, the Air Attache of the Canadian Embassy and Mrs. H. E. Taber, the Air Attache of the New Zealand Embassy and Mrs. J. L. Findlay the retiring head of the Australian Military Mission, Maj. Gen. John Chapman, Mrs. Chapman and their daughter, Betty, the Hon. and Mrs. Richard Coleridge and Miss Irene Boyle.

Australian Mission Head Is Dinner Guest

THE new head of the Australian Military Mission in Washington, Rear Admiral Harold B. Farncomb, and Mrs. Farncomb were entertained last evening at a dinner by the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Makin. Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews and the president of the Navy League, Frank Hecht of Chicago, Ill., were among the guests.

Others included the retiring head of the Australian Military Mission, Maj. Gen. John Chapman, and Mrs. Chapman, the Air Attache of the Embassy, Group Capt. C. W. Tea Heralds Greek Fashion Collection

MME. DENDRAMIS was hostess yesterday at an organizing tea for a forthcoming Greek fashions exhibit to be shown in Washington in April. The fashions have been collected by Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece, and committees in charge are to be drawn from a group of her friends. Yesterday's tea was at 4 p. m. at the embassy. Over 100 guests attended.

Marine Brass Attend Parties

SELECTION Board Meetings of the Marine Corps now being held in Washington have occasioned a number of parties. Marine Quartermaster General and Mrs. W. P. T. Hill entertained at a cocktail party yesterday for officers and their wives, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Oliver P. Smith gave a dinner for Commandant and Mrs. Clifton Cates, Liuet. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas E. Watson, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Leroy P. Hunt, and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Lemuel C. Shepherd.

Silver Benefit Tea To Aid French Town

A SILVER TEA will be held at the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis in Georgetown, Friday, January 27 from 4 to 6 p. m. for the benfit of the town of Vire, France.

Vire in Normandy was detroyed by American bombs in June, 1944. It is still a mass of rubble and 50 percent of its citizens are living in cellars and wooden barracks. The people need medical and surgical supplies; the schools are in need of equipment.

Already the St. Matthew's Committee of Washington, sponsors of the tea, has given help. It maintains a public health nurse; has equipped and furnished a tuberculosis clinic; has financially aided the College of St. Jean Eudes and sent food and clothing in the early postwar years.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet are sponsors for the tea; also His Excellency the Most Rev. Frederick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, all of whom will be guests at the tea.

Mme. Pandit Gives Party Before Leaving

ON THE eve of her departure for India, Mme. Pandit entertained yesterday at a cocktail party for the military. Over 400 guests were received by the hostess and her two assistants, the military attache of the embassy, Brigadier D. Chaudhuri, and Mrs. Chaudhuri. Party hours were from 6 to 8 p. m.

Pink and white flowers decorated the gold drawing room, and in the dining room Indian and American foods were served from a buffet table covered with lace and centered with pink roses.

The gathering included military, naval and air attaches of the different embassies, Army and Navy officials, members of the Foreign Liaison Office, and Cabinet members and their wives, as well as State Department officials.

Ambassador Pandit leaves today for New York, whence she will fly tomorrow for London. She will stop over in Cairo for a day and reach Bombay on Monday.

Bare Facts About Spring

Open Season for Necklines Due—But There'll Be a Little Cover-up Added

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 12.—It's going to be an open season for necklines.

But, likely as not, you'll need a radio eye to catch the right effect. For it seems that every designer in town has concocted some device—sleeve, bolero, scarf, collar, cape or stole—with which to cover up that which was first meant to be bared.

Could be, it is a new version of the two-piece dress. But whatever it is, it is mighty cute, and functional as well. For it satisfies, with a minimum of fabric, the fashion needs of every hour, and every type of figure.

When summertime rolls around the majority of dresses will be sleeveless, with low, rounded neckline, both fore and aft. The smartest ones, however, will feature a bit of disguise at the top and you'll never guess but what this accessory is part of the dress.

Miss Preston

Tina Leser uses a so-called "beach sweater," a tiny whiff of yarn that circles around under the arm-holes and rims the top of a backless dress. She puts these, in matching or contrasting shades over almost all her clothes from bathing suits to filmy evening dresses. They go equally well with her Siamese-inspired cotton prints, rugged denims or Chinese silks.

Borrowed From 'South Pacific'

JANE DERY adapts an overhead bolero from a costume worn by Mary Martin of "South Pacific" fame. It appears, in her collection, in a very short, flared version, with a wide open cuffed neckline, and is shown over a natural colored cashmere jersey with strapless bodice.

Hattie Carnegie does them all one better by putting the accessory under, not over the dress. It's her latest prodigy—the self bra—made of the same fabric as her shirtwaist dress which is slit to the waistline.

Nettie Rosenstein also enjoys the armhole boleros for her strapless day dresses and does them in all sorts of tricky, interesting fabrics. But her favorite is a flared, sling Bertha collar with which she completely covers the top of a bare topped dress, and achieves the approved 1950 fashion of a broad look below the shoulders.

Christian Dior generally uses traditional little jackets with his dresses. But, not to be outdone, he makes one street dress with a neckline that is near chin height in front, drops to the waist in back.

For every hour of the day or night, the low-necked, sleeveless dress appears to be the big noise this year. But, as you can see, we're really supposed to add something to it. A long rope of pearls, if you've nothing else on hand.

McCardell Does It Again

THAT talented young woman from Frederick, Md., Claire McCardell, has done it again. She has designed a top-flight collection, each piece of which will bring shouts of delight from her fun-loving, youthful followers.

Miss McCardell, showing her spring collection here today, proved she can put as much strength and movement into a narrow silhouette as she did into her famous full-skirted one. The latter was long the pride and joy of the college and career girl, because it gave them a maximum of style at a minimum price. It was the special property of the woman under 30—and the envy of those in older age brackets.

Well, her new skirts are equally as charming. And, while she has relented enough to include many narrow silhouettes in her new collection, she still retain many billowing ones. So, her fans can take their choice.

Pleats are the main story for spring, Miss McCardell believes, and she offers them in versions never seen before. There are sheer wools that look like ginghams, knife-pleated so finely that they seem woven into the fabric. Nylons, crepes, jersies, cottons, all types of materials get the "pleat" treatment from La McCardell. She even puts them in bathing suits.

"Don't worry about the cleaning problem," she assures us. "The pleats are permanently pressed into the fabric. They won't come out when dipped in cleaning fluid and they do not need to be pressed separately."

Miss Helmick Will Marry Captain Ott

The engagement of Miss Joyce Gardiner Helmick to Capt. David Ewing Ott has been announced by her parents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Gardiner Helmick of Arlington. Capt. Ott is the son of Gen. and Mrs. Edward Stanley Ott (ret.) of Union Plantation, Plaquemine, La.

Miss Helmick was graduated from the University of Michigan where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. During the war she entered the Nurses Cadet Corps. She was also graduated from the University of Michigan, Nursing School, serving later with the Veterans' Administration. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Eli Helmick and the late Maj. Gen. Helmick, long stationed in Washington.

Capt. Ott attended Auburn University, where he was a member of Lambda Chi fraternity, and the United States Military Academy, from which he was graduated in 1944, going directly to the European area. He is now detailed as gunnery instructor in the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla., where the couple expect to make their home after their wedding in March.

Serra-Fitch Engagement Announced

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Signorina Maria Laura Serra, daughter of Signor and Signora Luigi Serra of Genoa, Italy, to Aubrey Wray Fitch, jr., son of Admiral A. W. Fitch, USN, retired, and Mrs. Fitch of Washington.

The bride-elect is a descendant of an old and distinguished family of northern Italy. Her mother is the former Rosetta Garibaldi. Her father is a well known investment banker in Genoa.

Mr. Fitch was graduated from St. James School; the University of Virginia, class of 1936, and Harvard School of Business Administration in 1938. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. During the entire war years he served in the Pacific area with the rank of Lieutenant Commander, USNR. He is now associated with U. S. Steel Export Co., of New York, with headquarters in Zurich, Switzerland.

Admiral and Mrs. Fitch will sail from New York January 16.

Mme. Bonnet Says:

Paris Women Make Clothes From Drapes

FRANCE is "galloping up the slope" to economic recovery, reports Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador.

In grocery stores where the Parisian housewife used to spend three hours with the daily marketing, fumbling with ration coupons for every commodity, she is now offered 13 eggs for a dozen.

Mme Bonnet outlined the progress of her people since their 1944 liberation at the luncheon meeting of the Air Force Officers' Wives Association yesterday at the Army Navy Country Club.

"Everywhere you walk along the crowded streets you see gay, exuberant faces. Everyone's happy and there are always exciting things to do in Paris."

But some visitors, after seeing the gay, ostentatious extravagance of Paris, fail to understand that France is such a poor nation, she commented.

It takes a woman to see through the outward glamour. The brightly colored billowing skirts most Parisian women wear are made in most cases from the prewar draperies of their houses. Their delicate blouses trimmed with handmade lace are made from "grandmother's old petticoats."

Club President Mrs. M. Dil Burnside presided at the meeting and entertainment chairman Mrs. Lawrence Kuter introduced the guest speaker.

Miss Fairall of Garfinckel's Sails for Paris

Miss Elizabeth Fairall, vice president of Julius Garfinckel & Co., and donor of The Julius Garfinckel Award for outstanding French accessory designs for the United States market, will leave today on the Queen Mary for Paris, where she will assist in the completion of details for the judging of the contest.

The first French-American design contest of its kind, the Garfinckel Award was originated by Miss Fairall in order to aid French designers in creating more articles suitable for export to the United States, and in the discovery of new French design talent.

The award will consist of prizes of 100,000 francs in 17 categories including handbags for day and evening, gloves, toilet or costume novelties, costume jewelry, leather goods including luggage, handkerchiefs, pottery, toys, children's wear, linen table accessories, lingerie and hostess gowns, and men's accessories.

The French designs, which have been arriving at Paris headquarters, 12 Rue Ambroise Thomas, since the contest was announced early this season, will be judged early in February by a jury consisting of Mrs. David Bruce, wife of the United States ambassador; Mrs. Barry Bingham, wife of the chief of the ECA Mission to France; Mrs. Rebecca Stickney Hamilton; Mrs. Charles E. Bohlen; Mrs. Despina Messinesi; Mrs. Thompson Biddle; Miss Dora Miller; Mrs. B. J. Perkins and Mrs. Geoffrey Parsons, jr.

The exhibit will be brought to this country later this spring.

Where to Buy Frame for Purse

I recently bought some leather from a wholesale leather goods company, with the intention of making a purse. However, I find it difficult to obtain a frame for the purse and some instructions for making same. I wonder if you could tell me of some store that sells frames for purses, and one that would also give me some instruction for making it. It is possible that there are some schools in leathercraft in the District and I wonder if you know of them.

B. K.

The Young Women's Christian Association, 17th and K sts. nw. has a course in handcraft including leather working which starts February 1. The class meets Wednesday nights from 6 to 8 and 8 to 10. The course runs for eight weeks and costs $8. In addition to leather crafts, blockprints, soft metals, fabric painting and stenciling, reed raffia, weaving and wood carving are taught.

All supplies for the course are ordered through the instructor and she will undoubtedly be able to order a frame for your purse, too.

My daughter has a rubber doll. The skin on the doll becomes black. I've removed this with soap and water and the last time I used a kitchen cleanser before I could remove the black. Within two days the skin was black again. Is there some way to treat the doll to prevent this? Washing seems to soften the rubber "skin." A. D. A.

The proprietor of a Washington doll hospital tells me that they have a good many complaints about the discoloration of the make rubber doll you mentioned in your letter. He says that in addition to discoloration the skin becomes tacky or sticky. This condition develops in dolls made from defective rubber and there is no permanent cure for it. If the doll was recently purchased, I suggest you discuss it with the dealer from whom you bought it. He may be willing to make some adjustment.

Another suggestion is to clean it with cold cream rather than water. One of our readers has made this suggestion and she says that if the doll is very soiled it may take two treatments. The cold cream should not add to the stickiness of the rubber and may help the condition by making the surface less susceptible to soil.

Please print in your column the name and address of the shop in Arlington which sells shoes which have been worn. I have three pair of 3½ B shoes worn twice each which are not right for my foot. M. L.

The shop we have mentibned is in Alexandria at 113 South Royal st. Their telephone number is Alexandria 0649.

I can't resist adding a few comments to your fine answer for N. T. concerning selecting furniture. My husband and I also favor modern, and purchased a fine quality dark brown walnut bedroom suite when we were married in 1941, which we are thoroughly enjoying. We also have one or two fine occasional pieces in the living room in the same finish. However, walnut and mahogany are not quite as hard as rock maple, oak and birch and if subject to any unavoidable "hard knocks" by children will show pits. Our dinette set of good quality rock maple and our son's crib and wardrobe of birch show no ill effects. I imagine the occasional pieces that can now be obtained in birch with that lovely sand colored finish would hold up very well. Young married couples who will probably have children surely need to choose furniture with great care. R. E. S.

Thank you for sharing your furniture experience with us!

I would like to find some old records of the 1920 period, Henry Burr, Gene Austin and other popular singers, whose songs were recorded around that time. I had quite a collection, but in moving they were either lost or stolen.

M. C.

Why don't you write to the Record Collector's Exchange, 56th st. and 5th ave., New York City for these records?

J. L.'s recent question about bread undoubtedly refers to the product of Pepperidge Farm of Norfolk, Conn., and Downingtown, Pa., which is carried by a large number of stores in the Washington area. It is made from white as well as whole wheat flour, both ground in old fashioned stone grist mills. The bread is all hand-kneeded and is made from a family recipe of the very colorful director of the enterprise, Mrs. Margaret Rudkin. M. D.

Thank you M. D. Several of our readers have written to say that the bread is sold at many independent groceries, a cooperative grocery in Fairlington, a large chain grocery in Washington and delicatessens. I wish to thank M. G. G., M. T., H. A., P. S. F., A reader, M. C., J. J. W., M. H., L. M. of Washington, L. S. of Silver Spring, L. C. H. of Edgewater, Md., H. S. W., Clinton, Md., and L. D. S. of Annandale, Va., for this information.

Fancy From the Neck Up: That's Dress de Rigeur For Waltz Group's Party

By Mary Van Rehsselaer Thayer

FRIDAY NIGHT, should you spot groups of queerly hatted, wigged and head-dressed people scurrying through Dupont Circle—don't be alarmed. It's only members and guests of Washington's Waltz Group en route to a fancy-dress session at the Sulgrave Club.

The intrepid waltzers are fancy only from the neck up for the party's to be a Bal de Tete and everyone has to tether atop his (or her) head either his most potent superstition or else his most hated bete noir. Some of the projected head-dresses sound terrific: live snakes, live cats, various flowers, 13s by the score.

More About Canine Psychiatry

SOME TIME AGO, hearing that Cocolo, a brash poodle belonging to the State Department's Bob Joyce, had almost been psychoalalyzed, we printed a line or two about the proposed procedure—which, however, the Joyces didn't follow through.

This week a national magazine published a feature about a Connecticut canine psychoanalyst. So we contacted Mrs. Bettye Clancy of the Hermitage Kennels, who not only clips some of the most aristocratic local poodles but also attempts to solve training and behavior problems.

Mrs. Clancy, who's been a "dogwoman" since early 'teens, is a pupil of the Carry-On Kennels' famous Blanche Saunders. (Mrs. Saunders, who can clip poodles 53 different ways, bred such famous poodles-about-town as the Walter Lippmanns' Brioche and Courage.) Mrs. Clancy denied vigorously that she psychoanalyzes dogs. Instead, she adjusts owners to canines!

All puppies, she says, are born sweet and gentle. Those becoming nervous or snappy are made so by humans—for dogs are carbon copies of the dispositions and environments of their masters. Owners of problem dogs consulting Bettye Clancy are shown a series of training films, taught basic obedience commands. Then, if the dog still continues recalcitrant, Mrs. Clancy will go to their homes, try to straighten them out there.

Around Washington, she says, poodles are fast becoming the most popular dog—for those who can afford them. Among outstanding poodle owners are Mme. Henri Bonnet, Mme. van Kleffens, Mrs. John Walker, Kay Halle (who owns the David Bruce's gray miniature "Clicquot"), the Hayden Channings and the Frank Wisners.

Only those people who understand that any and all pets are a responsibility, as well as an attraction, should own them, says Bettye Clancy, who remembers only too well a pretty lady who wanted a poodle to match her new gray fur coat! Incidentally, 16 months ago when Bettye's baby was born, the little girl received presents from most of the poodles in town!

She's 'Accessory After the Fact'

IN town visiting Mrs. Anne Archbold on Reservoir rd. is Gretchen Green, the only woman we've heard of who lives permanently on Ellis Island and the only woman we know who owns a bed with four posts made from giraffe necks and with four posts made from giraffe necks and heads!

Gretchen, famous bed and all, lives in her own apartment in the Ellis Island Marine Hospital, where sick United States and foreign seamen, as well as ill children taken from Displaced Persons groups arriving in New York, are cared for. Gretchen, who's with the Special Services, calls herself an "accessory after the fact to fill in odd moments left empty by the wonderful Gray Ladies."

She keeps the hospital clubroom open evenings, Sundays and holidays; entertains patients and Coast Guard dependents who live in the vicinity with everything from bingo to Theater Wing programs. She's experienced at her unusual career, having been a board member of the United Seamen's Service during the war and later, having done a Cairo stint at the RAF's Malcolm Clubs which were founded by Lady Tedder. She can even function as a Mary Haworth for Indian sailors—since she spent several years in India as disciple or follower of the great poet Rabindranath Tagore.

Predicts 81st Congress Will Approve 'Equal Rights' Amendment

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

DR. AGNES E. WELLS, chairman of the National Woman's Party, last night predicted that the Eighty-first Congress would pass the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution.

She ventured the prophecy in a talk before the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta, at the home of Miss Edie McChesney. At the same time she called upon sorority groups to work to obtain complete citizenship for all persons in the United States.

According to Dr. Wells, former dean of women at the University of Indiana, half the population in the United States lacks full citizenship under the Constitution. Women have only the vote and political rights, she maintained.

"There should be a common Bill of Rights for all human beings in the Constitution," she said.

Club Extends Eligibility

The University Women's Club, Inc., yesterday announced the broadening of membership eligibility. Henceforth, women graduates in law, dentistry, medicine and science can become members of the organization.

Zonta Hears Shaw

Latin American scientists and technologists soon will have access to more research tools with which they will be able to do more and more constructive research, Dr. Ralph Shaw, head librarian, United States Department of Agriculture, told members of the Zonta Club of Washington in a luncheon talk yesterday at the Dodge Hotel.

Among the communication centers for research is Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences in Costa Rica. From this center, scientists throughout Latin America will be able to obtain research material, the librarian explained. Mrs. Nancy Poore Tufts, club president, presided, and Dr. Inez Wilber, vice chairman of the program committee, introduced the speaker.

Mass Feeding Described

An imaginary tour "through the kitchen door" into the business of mass feeding was conducted by a panel of food experts at the Altrusa Club meeting last night at Brookings Institution.

Miss Augusta Clawson was moderator for the panel which included Mrs. Eleanor Whitmore, chief of the food standards section of Government Services, Inc., and Miss Coy Fife, training supervisor of this agency responsible for daily meals served to Government employes in Washington; and Miss Ruth Cornman, dietitian at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Miss Clawson said that, just as in the theatrical world where the slogan is "the show must go on," in the hospital world "the meal must go no regardless of such emergencies as employe grievances, strikes, food shortages, late deliveries and other last-minute complications."

Tea for Wellesley Visitor

Miss Mary E. Chase, director of admissions of Wellesley College, will be guest of honor at a tea given by the president of Washington Wellesley Club, Mrs. George L. Meleney. The tea, scheduled for January 14, 3 to 5 p. m., will highlight the director's visit here. While in town she will visit colleges in the area.

Prize Toy From Kitchen

Many kitchen articles make good toys. Measuring cups and strainers, ordinary pots and pans, wooden spoons and mixing bowls all have their place. But there's nothing quite so pleasing to the young child as a cooky-making or cake-decorating set. There's great fun in screwing on and off the various end patterns and moving the plunger up and down.

Ordinary cooky cutters make fine play materials, too. Children like to use them as patterns, drawing around the Christmas trees, the rabbits, hearts, clovers, spades or whatever forms are in your set. And if you're not too fussy a housekeeper and are willing to stand a little mess, some of these cooky cutters, a wad of clay and a rolling pin to flatten it out assure several hours of fun. There's deep satisfaction in flattening out the clay, rolling and rolling it until it is flat enough to cut out "cookies" merely by pressing the cutters on the "dough."

Rape Jury Told Of Red Stains On Dungarees

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The finding of red-stained dungarees in the room of Hugh G. Mincey, 33-year-old iron worker, was described yesterday in District Court at the opening of Mincey's trial on charges of raping a 4-year-old girl last September 13.

Police Pvt. Norman L. Jones testified Mincey admitted him to his room on the fifth floor of a rooming house at 513 H st. nw., shortly after the rape.

"I opened the closet door and I saw a dirty pair of workpants with a heavy belt lying on the floor," Jones said.

"Hanging on a nail on the trim of the closet I noticed a pair of dungarees. They were spotted with what appeared to be blood.

Called Attention to Stains

"I called Mincey's attention to them," the officer continued. "He didn't answer. His face turned pale and he walked to the window with his back to me. Finally, he said he guessed the spots were paint. He grew profane and I went downstairs to report to my superiors."

The witness said that when he returned, a different pair of trousers was hanging from the nail. He asserted Mincey declared it was the same pair. The stained pair was found shortly afterward under the bed in a room adjoining that of Mincey, Jones said.

Earlier, medical testimony revealed that the child's face was bruised and her body lacerated and bloodstained when she was found in a coma lying in a second-floor corridor of the hotel.

Victim Excused From Stand

Prosecutor Cecil Heflin, who said he would ask the death penalty for Mincey, abandoned plans for calling the small victim as a witness. The thin, brown-haired little girl appeared on the verge of tears and whispered "Mama! Mama!" when first summoned and was then excused.

The child's mother, estranged from her taxi driver husband, testified that she confronted Mincey at police headquarters after his arrest. She said Mincey admitted beating the child but denied raping her. Mother and daughter lived at the same rooming house as Mincey.

The trial will resume at 10 a. m. today before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough and a jury of eight men and four women.

Mincey is defended by Attorneys Harry Ahern and T. Emmett McKenzie.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Frank Loesser, now in the throes of writing his songs for the Damon Runyon musical, "Guys & Dolls," tild Harry Kumitz, the film producer, that he was so busy he had been unable to do any Christmas shopping . . . "The same thing happened to me. I got too busy finishing a picture, and couldn't shop for gifts," said Kurnitz. "So I just invited some of my friends to my house, threw some money on the floor and let 'em scramble for it."

Ambassador Ruth Bryan Rhode has joined the list of those whose tributes will be presented to Norman Thomas at his testimonial luncheon next month. Mrs. Rhode is the daughter of William Jennings Bryan, who was a presidential candidate three times. In her message to Thomas, six times candidate for the Presidency on the Socialist ticket, Mrs. Rhode wrote: "In our family we have some experience in presidential races which are run, but not won."

Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, the head of Madison Square Garden, addressed the New York sportcasters at their luncheon at Al Schacht's. General Kilpatrick mentioned their accomplishments and was particularly enthusiastic about the lady who had done the commentary at the telecast of the horse show. "She was wonderful," said General Kilpatrick. "She really knew her horses backward."

This probably is an apocryphal story, told by a Washington official whose father had given him a cigar sealed in a glass case. His father, a Civil War veteran, told him that he once had stepped up to President U. S. Grant during a parade, said: "I was with you at Appomattox," and that Grant then had given him this cigar . . . During the war the official worked at home late, and suddenly found that he had no cigars or cigarettes. He eyed the glass case, and his wife said: "No. You couldn't. You mustn't. . . . "But I can't work unless I smoke," the official insisted. "It's hermetically sealed, and can be used. I'll substitute another cigar, later. Nobody'll know the difference" . . . He opened the case, took the Grant cigar, lit it, inhaled, returned to his desk—and then the cigar exploded.

Herb Shriner's five-minute telecast follows the "Prize Party" show, and is made in front of the same audience which has just seen the pie-throwing, slapstick routines. In warning the studio audience that his back-home humor differs from the rowdy show they'd just witnessed, Shriner told them: "You'll find my act a little slower. I don't mind if you don't laugh," he added. "—just don't stare at me."

Falls Church Rezoning Plan Is Opposed

A proposal to rezone the 89 acres of Kerns Farms, a mile south of Falls Church, Va., to permit the construction there of low-cost housing met vigorous opposition last night.

Owners of more expensive homes nearby, ranging in value from $15,000 to $60,000, voted unanimously to oppose such a step.

Members of the Sleepy Hollow Citizens Association voted to battle the rezoning plan when it is considered by the board of supervisors, which also serves as the zoning commission in Fairfax County, next Wednesday.

The resolution said the residents would offer no resistance to a development plan which would bring to the section homes comparable to those now there.

According to a spokesman for the Sleepy Hollow Citizens Association, Mrs. Jessie Kerns, owner of Kerns Farm, has asked that her property be rezoned as urban to facilitate sale of the property to the Midland Homes Corp.

The corporation, it was said, would then build on this property homes costing as little as $7900.

Under the county zoning law, Kerns Farm is now classified as suburban and rural residential and a home cannot be built on a parcel of land of less than a half acre.

If rezoned as urban, each house would require only 7200 square feet of land.

Master Zoning Plan Studied In Rockville

Preparations for a land use study of the city of Rockville leading to adoption of a master zoning plan were announced yesterday by Mayor G. LaMar Kelly, jr.

Paramount need of the growing community, according to Kelly, is a parking area to accommodate 2000 vehicles. At present, Rockville has offstreet parking facilities for 500 cars.

The study will also be directed toward planning for more through streets, proper use of commercial areas and establishment of parks and recreational areas.

City Manager John G. McDonald said the study will be conducted by John H. Markland, former Rockville civil engineer.

Careful planning for best land usage is demanded by Rockville's recent sixfold increase in area and rapid development of new areas, Kelly said.

As the study progresses, the master plan will be coordinated with that of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the mayor said.

Silver Spring Site To Be Purchased For Junior High

The Montgomery County Board of Education has agreed to purchase approximately 15½ acres of land as a site for the Eastern Suburban Junior High School.

The land, on Old Bladensburg rd. near Franklin ave., Silver Spring, was offered to the board by the Cafritz Construction Co. at $4000 an acre.

Plans for the school, according to Assistant Superintendent of Schools Richard E. Carpenter, call for 25 classrooms, a cafeteria, library, gymnasium and offices. No definite construction plans have been made yet, he said.

At its meeting, the board also awarded the contract for an addition to the Bradley Elementary School, Madison and Heartsdale aves., Bethesda, Md., to E. A. R. Searle, for $146,326.

McBride Heads County Firemen

Chief M. E. McBride, of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, has been elected chairman of the recently formed Montgomery County Fire Board.

Vice chairman of the board, composed of representatives of the county's 15 departments, is Chief W. Valentine Wilson of Rockville.

The board was formed to advise the county director of safety on matters of fire prevention, coordination of departments, equipping and financing departments, and other fire protection matters.

Bubblegum Bequest Is Ruled Invalid

Winchester, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals probably will be asked to decide whether there'll be bubblegum for the 400 youngsters of John Kerr public school from the estate of the late Charles B. Henry.

Judge Elliott Marshall ruled in Corporation Court today that a trust fund created by Henry's will for the benefit of the children was invalid.

Late today, however, it was indicated the case will be appealed by Harry K. Benham, attorney for the Shenandoah Valley National Bank, trustee and executor under Henry's will.

Henry, 80-year-old curbside merchant who died last April, left a will specifying that the income of his estate should be divided each Christmas and Easter among the John Kerr pupils.

In holding the trust fund invalid, Judge Marshall ruled it was not a charitable trust, that it did not to provide for educating the children, and that the effect would be to tie up Henry's estate for all time.

Court Refuses Review in Case Of Girl Slayer

Richmond, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—A review of the case of Lee (Buddy) Scott, 17, serving 99 years for the murder of Dana Marie Weaver, was refused today by Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals.

Scott, Eagle Scout and former choir boy, was convicted by a Roanoke Hustings Court jury last July 2 of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of the 13-year-old girl. Her body was found May 9 in Christ Episcopal Church.

Plasterer on Job Sits for 3 Days With 7 Children

That was the story Padgett told authorities today after three days of diaper changing, cooking, and "playing with the kids."

Padgett said he went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Durbin Saturday to do some repairs.

Mrs. Durbin left the house to "go downtown." She asked Padgett to watch the seven children, ranging from 11 years to 10 months. She said she'd be right back.

Padgett said she didn't return.

"I finally put the kids to bed after I fixed dinner," he said. "The kids were swell."

When juvenile authorities heard of the plasterer's plight, they came to the rescue. The children were put in a home and Padgett went back to his plastering. Authorities said Mrs. Durbin still hadn't come home.

Her husband was reported en route here from Indianapolis, where he had been working on a construction job.

Alexandria Exchange Club to Hear Beard

Edward A. Beard, past president of the Exchange Club of Washington, will address a meeting of the newly organized Exchange Club of Alexandria at 6:15 p. m. today at the Beachcomber Restaurant, Prince st. Beard is district governor for Maryland of the National Exchange Club.

Preliminary committees of the Alexandria group were announced yesterday. W. Bruce Silcox and Peter C. Brown, program; Thomas E. Van Note and Marvin C. Hall, attendance; R. H. Bailey and S. D. Gibson, fellowship. R. W. Buckingham is preliminary president, and W. L. Powell, secretary.

Navy Plant at Solomons Going to West Coast

By The Associated Press

Transfer of the civil engineering research laboratory from Solomons, Md., to Port Hueneme, Calif., will be completed by January 23, the Navy said yesterday.

A spokesman said the move will save the Navy about $400,000 yearly in operating expenses and about two million dollars that it would cost to erect a permanent building at Solomons. The building there had been used by the Navy for mine testing during the war.

Bladensburg Incinerator Gets Too Hot

Citizens complained to the Bladensburg Town Council last night that things are getting too hot at the Suburban Sanitary Commission's incinerator just outside town.

The complainants said they had no objection to the regular burning inside the trash incinerator plant, but that large trash fires now are being built outside. Citizens declared the condition has existed for four or five months.

During a discussion of the town's proposed new fire code the fire siren sounded for a blaze at 5104 54th pl., where the floor of one room of a house was burned.

The proposed fire code is a model ordinance prepared by fire underwriters. George McLeish, town attorney and a member of the House of Delegates, is drafting it into final form.

Contract Ends Strike Threat By Engineers

A threatened strike was averted yesterday when the AFL stationary engineers signed a new work contract with 10 major Washington hotels.

Details of the agreement were withheld pending a meeting of local 99, according to Jesse West, business agent. The union has been seeking a standard scale of $1.92½ cents an hour for the engineers, most of whom have been getting $1.50 an hour from the hotels.

The agrement was reached at a meeting of the union's executive committee with Joseph C. McGarraghy, attorney representing the hotels: Wardman Park, Shoreham, Carlton, Statler, Willard, Washington, Raleigh, Hamilton, Lafayette and Continental.

The local yesterday began high-level negotiations with the New York representatives of six theaters here: Capitol, Palace, Warner, Metropolitan, Trans-Lux, and Tivoli. As with the hotels, Local 99 has threatened to strike against the five movie houses to win the $1.92½ cents an hour scale.

Teachers' Union Seeks Change in Sick Leave Law

Revision of the teachers' sick and emergency leave law was asked yesterday by Local 27 of the American Federation of Teachers.

Dr. Paul Cooke, union president, said the group will petition the Board of Education and Congress to amend the law to give teachers additional time off providing they pay substitutes.

The local also protests present interpretation of the law which makes it necessary for teachers to apply for emergency leave in advance, and requires them to have a doctor's certificate for more than three consecutive days' absence because of illness.

D. C. Police Get Youth, 2 Boys Arrested in Car

Montgomery County police yesterday turned over to District authorities a youth and two juveniles arrested Tuesday night in an automobile reported stolen in Washington.

Lieut. Marion Dayhoff and Sergt. James R. Burdette said they held the three who were unable to produce evidence of ownership of a 1950 Cadillac they were attempting to push from the mud near Darnestown.

District police charged Sir Moses Williams of 1151 Stevens rd. se. with unauthorized use of an automobile. The juveniles, aged 16 and 17, were turned over to juvenile authorities.

14th St. Gaming Arrest Made by Vice Squad

Members of the police vice squad entered an apartment in the 3000 block of 14th st. nw. yesterday and arrested Wilbur R. Bruner, 33, of 1219 D st. se.

He was charged with setting up a gaming table, and released on $1500 bond for Municipal Court appearance today.

'Roosevelt' Leading as Bridge Name

"Roosevelt" is leading as a name for the South Capitol st. bridge—but honors are divided between Franklin, Teddy and Eleanor.

FDR has been named four times in about 30 suggestions sent the District Commissioners; his distant cousin, Theodore, twice and his widow, Eleanor, once.

Others named twice were Washington, Herbert Hoover and Frederick Douglass, nineteenth century Negro leader.

Monroe, McKinley Suggested

New names submitted in the past week included James Monroe, William McKinley, John C. Calhoun, Gen. George Patton, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Albert Einstein.

Also these lesser-known names: Elizabeth Blackwell, first licensed woman physician (recommended by Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio); John Howard Payne, composer of "Home Sweet Home"; Alexander Shepherd, territorial governor of the District in the 1870's; John Mercer Langston, Negro Congressman from Virginia for six months in 1890; William W. Price, former Congress Heights Citizens Association president and one of first to suggest the bridge; Vincent B. Costello, District employe killed in World War I.

Would Honor Dancer

A Washington press agent offered the name of a local dancer because "the name . . . would remind the public of the graceful lines of the structure." Also mentioned were Columbia, Centennial and Carrollsburg.

The bridge will be dedicated Saturday at 10 a.m. Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, will speak; Della Mae and Mary Lou Randall, identical 12-year-old twins from Congress Heights, will cut the ribbon opening the bridge, and a motercade will proceed across the bridge and back.

'This I Remember'

Roosevelt Believed He Owed The People Leadership

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

FRANKLIN trusted Ed Flynn and he trusted James Farley, and they were both worthy of his trust. Ed Flynn came to understand much that my husband believed in and worked for. He himself believed in many of the same things. Jim Farley, as certain types of men do, believed in the man for whom he worked but was not so much concerned with the ideas and ideals for which that man stood.

Many times, in connection with the work of the women's division of the National Democratic Committee, he told me that if I thought a thing should be done he would do it. I often knew, however, that he was really not convinced and perhaps had not even bothered to understand what it was all about. He trusted me as a person, I think, in connection with the work of the women, and he trusted Franklin. Jim Farley had a marvelous gift with people; he could do a prodigious amount of work, and he carried his share of the burden at that time just as magnificently as did Louis and Ed Flynn. What happened later is another story!

There were many other devoted and loyal men who believed in my husband and who during the campaign contributed generously of their time and money and energies. Among them were Mr. Franklin Walker, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, sr., Mr. Henry Morganthau, jr., Mr. W. Forbes Morgan and Mr. Bernard M. Baruch.

These men gathered around them other men who became active in planning to meet future problems. The men who formed the so-called "brain trust" were largely picked by Louis Howe and Sam Rosenman. They were a group with whom Franklin consulted in laying plans to meet the problems all of us were aware had to be met by whomever was elected President in 1932. There were lawyers, professors, politicians, all gathered together to think out ways and means of accomplishing specific things. The original "brain trust' consisted of Prof. Raymond Moley, Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman.

Steadfast to Objective

THROUGHOUT Franklin's career there never was any deviation from his original objective to help make life better for the average man, woman and child. A thousand and one means were used, difficulties arose, changes took place, but this objective always remained the motive for whatever he did.

In the end, in spite of all his efforts to prevent it, a war had to be fought, because the inexorable march of events showed that only by war could fascism be wiped out. The persecution of the Jews was only the beginning of injustices which would have spread to all those whose philosophies differed from that of the Fascist leaders. All freedom for the average man would have vanished, and with its going the objectives which Franklin and all men in democratic nations believed in would have been lost.

Franklin always felt that a President should consider himself an instrument chosen by the people to do their bidding. But he also believed that a man as President should consider that he had an obligation to enlighten and lead the people.

I think he felt that in great crisis he was guided by a strength and wisdom higher than his own, for his religious faith, though simple, was unwavering and direct.

I have never known a man who gave one a greater sense of security. I never, for example, heard him say that any problem was too great for human beings to solve. He recognized difficulties and often said that while he did not know the answer he was completely confident that there was one—that somewhere a man could be found who could provide the answer. One had to try, he said, until one found the answer, either by oneself or through someone else. I never knew Franklin to face life or any of its problems with fear, and I have often wondered if his own courageous attitude was not communicated to the people of the country. It may well have been a most important factor in helping us to pull ourselves out of the depression during the first years of his administration as President. He knew that the best policies in the world would not avail unless the people themselves made those policies work. But he believed in the courage and ability of men, and they responded.

From a personal standpoint, of course, I did not want my husband to be President. I realized, however, that it was impossible to keep a man out of public service if that was what he wanted and undoubtedly was well equipped for. My reluctance to see Franklin President was, I realized, pure selfishness, so I never mentioned my feelings on the subject to him.

Owed Much to Walsh

THE nominating convention was held in Chicago, with Senator Thomas J. Walsh as permanent chairman. In any final analysis Franklin owed much to Senator Walsh for his skillful handling of the convention. I stayed in Albany, but some of the children were present at this convention.

Alfred E. Smith, who was also a candidate for the nomination, had many ardent supporters. I think he felt strongly that gratitude should have compelled Franklin to withdraw in his favor. He had not forgotten that he had been instrumental in getting Franklin to reenter public life four years previously. In the meantime, however, my husband had acquired a feeling of complete political independence. And I think he had a strong conviction that he better than anyone else in the party could meet the tremendous crisis facing the country. A man must have such confidence in himself or he could never undertake the heavy responsibilities of leading a nation. People used to comment to me upon the egoism of my uncle, President Theodore Roosevelt. I know that many people felt Franklin D. Roosevelt had the same quality. To a certain extent they were undoubtedly right; no man could successfully carry the burdens of the Presidency without this quality.

I always felt that my husband's religion had something to do with his confidence in himself. As I have said, it was a very simple religion. He believed in God and in His guidance. He felt that human beings were given tasks to perform and for those tasks the ability and strength to put them through. He could pray for help and guidance and have faith in his own judgment as a result. The church services which he always insisted on holding on Inauguration Day, anniversaries and whenever a great crisis impended were the expression of his religious faith. I think this must not be lost sight of in judging his acceptance of responsibility and his belief in his ability to meet whatever crisis had to be met.

On the eve of my husband's nomination we sat up the entire night in the Executive Mansion.

Two days later he, John, Elliott and I flew to Chicago, where Franklin was to accept the nomination.

Smith Didn't Wait

GOVERNOR SMITH, his family and supporters did not wait to congratulate Franklin, but left Chicago immediately. Other candidates who were less bitter stayed on.

In September Franklin departed on a long campaign trip across the country.

Even after a draft had been submitted for literary criticism to the best person who had been asked to help from that point of view, I have known him to read the final copy over and over again. He would put in words or take them out, transpose sentences and polish phrases until he knew the speech by heart.

I have, however, known Franklin to take a speech that had almost reached the final stages and tear it up. He would then begin all over again because he felt the others had not made his points clear enough for everyone to understand.

Franklin had a gift for simplification. In his speeches he often insisted upon telling simple, homely stories, drawn from conversations with visitors or with friends in Warm Springs or Hyde Park. In these places his opportunity was greatest for close contact with people who talked to him as a human being and not as a public official. These simple stories, illustrating points he wished to make, helped to give many people the sense that he was talking to them in their own living rooms and that they knew and understand the complicated problems of Government.

His voice lent itself remarkably well to radio. It was a natural gift, for in his whole life he never had a lesson in diction or public speaking. He had joined in debates from the time he went to school, and perhaps when he was young had taken singing lessons, because at college he liked to sing. But that was the extent of his training in voice. Unquestionably, though, his voice helped him to make the people of the country feel that they were an intelligent and understanding part of every Government undertaking during his administration.

Met Boettiger

ELECTION of 1932 we were in New York City, where I circulated between the State and the National Committee headquarters.

There was one young reporter I had come to know fairly well. He had been assigned to Albany and had spent several weekends at Hyde Park. And he had gone along on the campaign trips. His name was John Boettiger. Later he was to marry our daughter Anna and to become one of the people for whom I have a special personal feeling. I have teased my daughter by saying I knew John before she knew him.

Election night, amid all the rejoicing after the results were known, he came to me and said: "I wish I knew what you are really thinking and feeling." He showed in that question great perspicacity, for one would naturally expect the wife of a man who had just been elected President of the United States to be completely overjoyed.

I was happy for my husband, of course, because I knew that in many ways it would make up for the blow fate had dealt him when he was stricken with infantile paralysis. Also I had implicit confidence in his ability to help the country in a crisis. Naturally he had wanted to win this opportunity to serve his country in public life.

As a matter of fact I was probably more deeply troubled than even John Boettiger realized. As I saw it this meant the end of any personal life for me. I knew what traditionally should lie before me for I had watched Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt preside as First Lady. . . . I cannot say that I was pleased at the prospect . . . The turmoil in my heart and mind was rather great that night, and the next few months were not to make any clearer what the road ahead would be.

Losing Things

Whenever I miss anything . . . That I have put away . . . I raise the roof and generally . . . Complain throughout the day . . . I question all the children and . . . I ask my wife if she . . . Has seen that certain article . . . That means so much to me . . . But if Mrs. frets about . . . Some item she has lost . . . I tell her to forget the thing . . . Regardless of its cost . . . While she insists on finding it . . . In our domestic space . . . And she refuses to accept . . . A new one in its place . . . When my possessions disappear . . . My mood is mighty cross . . . But I am never worried when . . . My wife reports a loss.

Washington Slept There, But This Generation Isn't as Lucky

A local executive, who prefers to remain anonymous, writes:

"One of these days, a hotel manager is going to discover that not all his guests care to leap from their beds at the crack of dawn.

"This will no doubt revolutionize the entire hotel industry, because once the secret is out other innkeepers will also get wind of it.

"The other night we worked quite late on a special project at my office, and by the time I got away it was the middle of the night, and my head was so full of debits and credits I thought it would split. So, instead of going home (I live in Baltimore) I thought I'd stay at one of Washington's better hotels.

"By the time I got something to eat and got to bed, it was after 3 o'clock. But promptly at 7:30 the next morning the corridor outside my room was invaded by the noisiest company of men and women it has ever been my misfortune to encount r.

"The straw boss was a woman undoubtedly chosen for the shrillness o' her voice. The crew she directed seemed to vie with each other for second-place honors. And I am convinced that Boulder Dam was built with less noise and confusion .har marked their setting up an extra bed in the next room—or whatever it was they were doing.

"As a result, I was driven from my room before 8, and am now sitting in my office trying desperately to stay awake long enough to finish dictating this letter."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Is this Cody Pfanstiehl of WTOP a fugitive from the president's office at the University of Chicago? Someone of that name worked there in 1941.

If it's the same fellow, that accounts for the twins. I also had twins after leaving that madhouse.

Betty Espinosa
4224 Albemarle st. nw.

Dear Betty:

It's a small world. Cody says he was doing public relations work at the University of Chicago in 1941, and was forever going into the president's office on business.

When I asked whether he ever did anything more than go through doors, Cody thought deeply before offering the bright reply: "I opened 'em first."

Incidentally, he already has a name for his twins. He's going to call them WTOP and WTOP-FM. The nursery will be where you'll "hear them all." Bill.

COURSE HUMOR

Fort Dupont golfers have been slicing their drives through the windows of nearby Sousa Junior High School.

Apparently there's going to have to be a slight revision in the course—either in the golf course, to move the line of fire, or in the kids' arithmetic course, to modernize the lesson to:

"Two and two are FORE! Everybody duck, here comes another one."

HAPPY NEW YEAR

SUGGESTION BOX

Maxine Boyd of 5405 Dix st. ne. wonders why cigarette manufacturers don't borrow the "gift certificate" idea and sell books of cigarette coupons, with each coupon good for a pack of that brand of cigarettes, as needed.

$64 QUESTION

On April 14, 1948, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., asked his audience to sign visitor's cards.

Worshiper Harry S. Truman filled out a card, just like everybody else. Under "occupation" he put: "Government worker." And in the line which asked "How long do you expect to be in Washington?" he slyly wrote: "Until January 20, 1949, maybe longer."

For Boys and for Girls!

Young eyes are very important—don't neglect them! Safeguard the precious vision of your children by having their eyes examined regularly. Perhaps their low marks in school are due to faulty vision. Perhaps their lack of enthusiasm for sports is due to strained eyesight. Check on it—just to play safe. Make sure your children are "seeing" properly.

Merry-Go-Round

Sam Rayburn Gets a Hat And a Party

By Drew Pearson

RAYBURN

"Sam is the only man I know," commented the President, "who could stay in Washington over 40 years and still wear the same size hat he wore when he came here. I don't know what kind of a hat this is," Mr. Truman continued, "but I'll show you how to fix it."

Showing he hadn't lost his touch as a haberdasher, Mr. Truman flipped the hat into shape and planted it ceremoniously on Rayburn's head. As the guests roared, Rayburn yanked it down over his ears.

The President also kidded Rayburn about his age.

"Vice President Barkley tells me when he was a kid he used to listen to Sam on the lecture platform," Mr. Truman confided. "But, in view of Barkley's known age, I'll be damned if I can understand how Sam can be just 68."

The luncheon was attended by both Democrats and Republicans, all close friends of the Speaker. This caused Senator Lyndon Johnson, master of ceremonies, to announce it was a "bipartisan birthday luncheon." Later he introduced Rayburn as "a man who has made his friends proud and his critics ashamed."

With a voice sometimes choked with emotion, Rayburn told how he was 1 of 11 children, spoke of their early troubles and struggles, boasted that 7 still came home for Christmas dinner last year.

"No place in the world could we have had the opportunity we have had in America," he said.

Rayburn went on to say that he believed "97 or 98 percent of the world are good people and have good in them. I haven't any room in my heart or time in my life for hatred. I love people and I believe in them . . . Under the leadership of a plain man from the farm lands of Missouri, we have taken the courage to lead the world for good and righteousness. I believe we will succeed:"

Small-Business Champion

The House Small Business Committee will dish out some unsavory, but important, facts on the alarming growth of monopoly in a forthcoming report to Congress. The committee, headed by spade-calling Representative Wright Patman of Texas, will say in part:

"If monopoly continues at the present rate, either the giant corporations will control all our markets, the greatest share of our wealth, and eventually our Government, or the Government will be forced to intervene with some form of direct regulation of business.

"Either choice is inimical to those who believe in the American system of democratic government and free enterprise."

The committee will recommend a complete overhauling of the Federal Trade Commission, charging that the FTC has not given adequate protection to little-business men trying to compete with big monopolies.
